U.S. AND BRITISH POLICY MUTUAL IN CARIBBEAN

Noninterference Is Plan Agreed On.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—[Special.]—President Hoover, it transpired today, is pursuing his new Caribbean policy of nonintervention for the protection of Americans with assurance that he will not be embarrassed by the action or attitude of the British government.

Great Britain, it turns out, has taken the same stand with reference to British subjects in the interior of revolt ridden Nicaragua and revolution torn Honduras as has Mr. Hoover with respect to Americans and their property. Neither government will protect its nationals or their property except at points along the coast accessible to warships.

This common policy is one of the numerous results of the Anglo-American understanding reached by President Hoover and Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain at their meeting on the Rapidan in the fall of 1929. Coöperation between the two governments in international affairs was pledged on that occasion by the heads of the two branches of the English speaking people.

Ending MacDonald Plan.

The first tangible result was the settlement in 1930 of the dispute between Britain and America over limitation of naval armaments, which was brought about by the recession of Mr. Hoover from the stand taken by President Coolidge on the question of eight new cruisers.

Another result is diplomatic reciprocity. In its own special sphere of influence each nation receives the moral support of the other. Great Britain, for example, defers to America on the question of recognizing new governments in the western hemisphere, as in the cases of the revolutions in Argentina and Brazil last year, while the United States defers to Britain with respect to the recognition of new governments in Europe, the present question of recognizing the Spanish republic furnishing a case in point.

It now appears that Mr. Hoover embarked upon his new Caribbean policy with every reason to believe that he would be supported by Great Britain in his departure from our traditional position in regard to disturbances in the backward republics of central America.

Theory of Old Policy.

The theory of our policy hitherto was that it was necessary to police disturbed Caribbean countries in order to obviate intervention by European governments to protect their nationals, which intervention might lead to occupation that would be in violation of the Monroe Doctrine.

British acquiescence in the new Hoover policy was disclosed when Arthur Henderson, British foreign minister, was questioned in parliament last night concerning the killing of three British subjects in Nicaragua. It transpired the London government had taken action identical with that of Mr. Hoover in notifying British subjects that they would remain in the interior of Nicaragua at their own risk.

Due to Pacifist Ideals.

To Great Britain this was a change of policy no less notable than Mr. Hoover's reversal of the policy of his predecessor. Time out of mind the British government has been that the government protected its subjects wherever they might be.

The explanation is to be found in the fact that the MacDonald ministry is committed to the pacifist doctrine which condemns the use of force to protect nationals abroad.

Issues Nicaragua Statement.

"Our advices," said Mr. Hoover, "are that the Nicaraguan government has now placed in the field a total of 2,000 men of the newly created national guard in a drive to clean up Sandino and his fellow bandits. Our representatives advise that this force is several times that of Sandino and his bandits.

"Sandino has placed himself and his band outside the civilized pale by his cold blooded murder of eight or nine American civilians and many Nicaraguans at isolated places in the country.

"The Nicaraguan government has shown itself fully cognizant of its responsibilities. It is moving vigorously to resolve the difficulties created by the earthquake. While it may require time to accomplish their purpose due to the mountainous and jungle character of the country, I am confident Sandino will be brought to justice."

WHY CAN'T THESE CENTRAL AMERICAN REVOLUTIONS BE MADE TO SERVE SOME USEFUL PURPOSE?

Yesterday morning Betty Roth, 18 years old, was just an unemployed girl in Kansas City. At noon Betty was a stowaway on a National Air Transport plane bound for Chicago. And yesterday afternoon she arrived at the airport and found two policemen waiting for her.

At 11 o'clock yesterday the plane took off from Kansas City. After the plane had left Moline, Ill., the mate, Bob Dawson, found Betty in the baggage compartment.

Company officials, advised by radio of the unregistered passenger, notified Chicago Lawn police, but Betty was released after a warning.

"I had to get to Chicago—I've got a promise of a job here," the girl sullenly replied to inquiries. "I've been out of a job and I didn't have any money, so I hung around the airport down there for three days.

"I slipped into the hangar last night and got into the baggage space."

Waukegan Resident Is 99; Gives Rules for Long Life

Benjamin Whittleton of Waukegan yesterday celebrated his 99th birthday. He told his many visitors at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Thomas A. Newnham, 508 North County street, Waukegan, that his longevity was due to abstinence from liquor and tobacco and to the fact that he sleeps 10 hours every night. Mr. Whittleton came to this country from England in 1856 and has lived in Waukegan since 1911.

Providence, R. I., April 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld, known to the stage as Billie Burke, lost a bag containing between $3,000 and $4,000 in checks and a large sum of cash when she left a Boston-New York train for a few minutes here today. Providence police, to whom the loss was reported, were unable to discover any trace of the bag.

Accident Followed by Bad Dreams; Get $350 Damage

San Francisco, April 21.—(AP)—A Superior court jury here today ruled a bad dream was worth $350. It awarded that amount in damages to Mrs. Jean Sheehy and her daughter, Miss Helen Sheehy, who said they suffered nightmares since a street car collision in Twin Peaks tunnel Nov. 12, 1930.

Hawks Tries London-Rome Round Trip Flight in a Day

LONDON, April 22 [Wednesday].—(AP)—Capt. Frank Hawks, American flyer, left Heston airdrome at 6:30 a. m. in an attempt to fly to Rome and be back in London for dinner this evening.

Gunmen Raid Saloon and Kill Gangster

Gangland warfare flared up again last evening on the south side and when the smoke of battle cleared away the police found one well known police character dead and a second so badly beaten on the head that he may not recover. The police believe that the killers intended to clean up the gang controlled by Frank and Vincent McErlane, but failed in their purpose when their victim balked at leading them to the gang chief.

Edward Fitzgerald, 7356 South Union avenue, pal of Frank McErlane and accused some years ago as being his companion in the murder of Thad Fancher near Crown Point, Ind., was shot to death when he tried to run away from four men who had taken him prisoner.

Hoodlum Beaten by Gang.

Eddie Courtney, another hoodlum, 7906 South Hermitage avenue, who was indicted for efforts to fix the jury in the trial of former Gov. Small, was the man beaten over the head.

Fitzgerald was a brother-in-law of Eddie Kaufman, who was co-defendant with Courtney in the Small case. Kaufman is now supposed to be the partner of Frank McErlane in the beer business in the West Englewood district.

Story of the Battle.

About 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, according to witnesses, a large blue sedan drove up across the street from a saloon run by Eddie Neylon, former street car conductor, at 7358 South Peoria street. Two of the men went to the rear door of the saloon and two to the front door. They rapped at both doors and Courtney went to the rear door. As he opened it he was battered on the head with the butt of a shotgun.

The front door was then opened by one of the men who had entered from the rear and the other two men armed with pistols were let into the place.

"You come with us, you dirty double crosser," one of the men said to Fitzgerald, who was found in the place, as they dragged him toward the front door. He was taken to the street and then saw the waiting automobile standing across the street.

Shot When He Flees.

"Nix, nix, you are not going to take me for a ride, Joey," Fitzgerald was heard to say as he broke away from his captors. One of the gang calmly leveled an automatic pistol and shot him in the head. They left his body on the street car tracks as they ran to their automobile and sped away. Witnesses obtained the license number of the automobile, but it was found that the plates had been stolen from an automobile owned by a resident of Champaign.

Chief Investigator Pat Roche, Coroner Herman Bundesen and Assistant State's Attorney Harry Ditchburne hurried to the scene of the murder, as did many police officials.

One theory was that the shooting was a gang reprisal for the attempt several days ago on the life of Steve O'Donnell, brother of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell. He has been fired on several times recently.

The police believe that the killers were disappointed in not finding the McErlane gang leaders in the saloon and that they were trying to force Fitzgerald to lead them to where McErlane and Kaufman could be found so that the entire gang could be wiped out at one time. The McErlanes, it is reported, have been fighting over beer privileges in the territory and have refused to buy their beer from the Capone syndicate.

HOOVER JOINS IN PLANS FOR CITY JUBILEE

Secretary Lamont to Be His Envoy.

CHICAGO JUBILEE.

The Chicago Tribune Service bureau, 1 South Dearborn street, telephone Superior 0100, will supply all information to those planning to participate in the Chicago Jubilee May 11.

Robert P. Lamont, secretary of commerce, probably will represent President Hoover in the Chicago Jubilee, which is to be held in the downtown business district during the week commencing May 11. This was learned yesterday by the Washington bureau of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Hope that President Hoover himself might attend was entertained by sponsors of the Jubilee, but this expectation was dimmed because of new affairs of diplomatic delicacy arising over Nicaraguan and Honduran troubles. In the event the President cannot come Secretary Lamont probably will read a special message from him.

Washington to Coöperate.

Official circles in Washington regard the Chicago Jubilee as a meritorious attempt to demonstrate factually the improving economic trend, and are prepared to coöperate with Chicago according to statements yesterday.

In this connection the mimic air battle, to be staged by hundreds of war planes over Lake Michigan, off Navy pier, on May 20, was sought to be included as a feature of the Chicago Jubilee. A week ago the Washington bureau of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE made inquiries of the war department as to the possibility of advancing the date of the spectacular air show. This was previous to the publication of the original announcement of the Chicago Jubilee in last Sunday's TRIBUNE. At that time the bureau learned the date could not be changed.

Foreign Visitors Assured.

Another Washington phase of the Jubilee developed yesterday when Silas H. Strawn arrived at the capital as Chicago's representative at the International Chamber of Commerce convention which is scheduled for May 4 to May 9. Mr. Strawn will invite formally representatives of forty-six foreign countries to visit the Jubilee.

Their attendance is already assured and they will appear as guests of Col. Robert Isham Randolph, president, and the Chicago Association of Commerce, which is behind the Chicago Jubilee.

A survey of the progress of the Jubilee yesterday showed that it had expanded from a local event to a celebration with international aspects. Even the most optimistic sponsors of the Jubilee, including Col. Randolph, were amazed. They pointed out that the first public word of the event, carried in THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE, was only 43 hours old.

Hundreds of Calls Received.

Barometers of the interest aroused in the Chicago Jubilee were THE TRIBUNE public service office at 1 South Dearborn street and the headquarters of the Chicago Association of Commerce, each of which received hundreds of calls yesterday, many of them pledges of coöperation.

The two latest distinctive contributions to the Jubilee were a statement from Gov. Emmerson and the promise of Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, through his personal representatives, to exhibit his twenty millionth car, recently finished, and also possibly his first car, in the Jubilee.

Gov. Emmerson in his statement pledged the support and participation of the state, and said he hoped to attend at least one day of the Jubilee. In his proclamation he pointed out that the dedication of the replica of Fort Dearborn, first completed exhibit of the 1933 World's Fair, was a primary feature of the Jubilee.

Governor Praises Jubilee.

"But back of it," he said, referring to the Jubilee, "is the intent of Chicago's good citizens to proclaim to the world the greatness of our metropolis. I am heartily in accord with this movement to offset the criticisms and calumnies of Chicago that have been broadcast throughout the land. We of Illinois are proud of Chicago. In many ways it stands far above its metropolitan contemporaries.

"Chicago, born in the swampland along the Chicago river and the lake front has become the second largest city of the nation, and the fourth largest in the world within the space of one hundred years. Its influence in the industrial and financial affairs of the eastern and western hemispheres is the envy of other large cities.

"Its esthetic development is producing an architectural beauty that

Police Probe Delving Into Bank Deposits

Definite statements from the special grand jury investigating the Chicago police department that practically every officer of the department is to be investigated as to his income followed the reports yesterday that several bank accounts had been found to contain deposits far in excess of the known financial ability of several officers.

At present the names of only seventeen captains have been made public. There remain to be investigated the remaining captains and nearly all of the lieutenants. The discovery that one captain had bought some $48,000 worth of securities in the last four years—although a captain's salary is only $4,000 a year—impelled the grand jurors to demand the widening of the inquiry.

Officers to Face Quiz.

It is proposed to examine all bank accounts, question the officers, and then compare the bank showings with any brokers' records or any other records of business transactions necessary to substantiate the right of the officers to possess the money in question or to show its wrongful possession. Then the officers will be called before the grand jury, and in the event they refuse to answer it is planned to send them before the civil service commission for dismissal from the force.

Another plan of the grand jury is to ask for the records of banks in other cities. It is regarded as probable that many banks in other cities may decline to comply with the request of the jurors, but it is hoped that, in the interest of public policy, some may volunteer the information sought.

There have been reports to the grand jurors that several large accounts have been kept in Milwaukee banks, in Detroit, and as far away as Boston.

Records of Eight Captains.

So far the grand jury has obtained from banks the records of some of the financial transactions of eight police captains and it is expected that by the end of the week the jurors will have the available accounts of the others on the list of seventeen captains whose names are on the subpœnas duces tecum being served on all Chicago banks. The writs call for the production before the jury of savings and checking accounts, loans, real estate transfers, or security purchases handled by the banks for the captains named.

Assistant State's Attorney Charles J. Mueller, who is in charge of the jury's investigation of the police department, and Mr. Farmar declared after yesterday's session of the jury that several of the captains had bank balances that would require explanation.

Through the bank records, Mr. Mueller said, the jurors learned that several of the captains had lost large sums in the stock market. A number of them have large real estate holdings which are to be investigated, Mueller said.

Refuses to Name Captain.

Neither Mr. Mueller nor Mr. Farmar would name the captain whose investments of $48,000 were disclosed, but it was understood it was one of the following eight whose bank records have been procured: Michael Lee, Dennis Malloy, Hugh McCarthy, Willard Malone, Daniel Lynch, Martin Mullen, John Prendergast, or Thomas Wolfe. After the adjournment of the jury for the day Mr. Mueller inquired as to how long each of these eight had been captains of police.

Through sources other than the bank accounts, Mr. Mueller said, he learned that a number of police commanders are considered quite wealthy. Those whose wealth was acquired legitimately should have no hesitancy in testifying, he said, and he assured that they would not be embarrassed.

BRITISH EMPIRE RECOGNIZES NEW SPAIN REPUBLIC

Alfonso Gets Royal Greeting in London.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 21.—Early recognition of the Spanish republic by the United States is considered probable as the result of the action of Great Britain in extending diplomatic recognition today. Indications are that a decision will come some time next week, if not in the next day or two.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 21.—Great Britain and her dominions today extended recognition to the Spanish republic at about the same time that Alfonso XIII., a king without a throne, was received in London with wild acclaim.

While thousands were cheering the smiling Bourbon, the British empire sent instructions to Sir George Graham, British ambassador to Madrid, to officially inform the Spanish republic that the governments of the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa, and the Irish Free State had recognized the provisional government.

15 Nations Recognize Spain.

By its action Great Britain became the fifteenth nation to recognize new Spain. Sweden and the Swiss government also extended their recognition today.

Alfonso's reception on English soil was what any visiting monarch might expect. He landed at Dover from Calais this afternoon bent on a six day business visit during which he will arrange for the education of his son, Don Juan, in a naval academy. The exiled king may also seek a private chat with King George and Queen Mary at Windsor castle.

Alfonso was closely guarded by operatives from Scotland Yard from the time he disembarked at Dover. He was met by his former representative in England, Marquis Merry del Val, once dean of London's diplomatic corps. With the duke of Miranda, Alfonso's spokesman, and twelve retainers, the Bourbon boarded a train for London and a tumultuous reception.

10,000 Shout "Viva Alfonso."

Ten thousand persons gathered at Victoria station to greet Alfonso. As he stepped from his coach a mighty roar of "Viva el Rey" arose. The king grinned from ear to ear. Escorted by 200 policeman, Alfonso made his way to an automobile and was whisked to the Claridge hotel, where he was registered as the duke of Toledo. He was greeted in his suite by Manoel II., former king of Portugal. Afterward Alfonso went into seclusion and refused to see newspaper men. He also ate dinner in his rooms.

AWAITS U. S. ACTION

BY JAY ALLEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MADRID, April 21.—With the announcement of British recognition of the Spanish republic the government is convinced that American recognition is only a question of hours. Salvador de Madariage, Spanish writer, former official of the league of nations and Alfonso's history professor, was appointed new ambassador to Washington tonight.

The delay in recognition has already encouraged certain officials to try to undermine American prestige in South America. They are prepared to tell the Spanish Americans that the North American republic is not sympathetic with republican ideals. A group of radical writers who are greatly exercised over "Yankee imperialism" are prepared to spread the doctrine that Wall street, angry because another field of concessions has been lost, is avenging itself by holding up recognition.

U. S. Envoy Attacked.

Crisol, the journal that inherited most of the staff of El Sol when the latter was sold to the monarchy, today attacks Ambassador Irwin B. Laughlin. This paper accuses one diplomat from a "great republic not in Europe" of indiscretion. It says that in a conversation the diplomat qualified the new ministers from their pictures in the papers as "looking like jail birds" and then said he was glad there were high walls around the embassy to keep out bolsheviks.

"We cannot ask foreign diplomats to show sympathy for the régime we freely chose," the Crisol states. "But they serve international relations badly by trying to discredit a movement as orderly and exemplary as this one is. We advise this one to leave the company of 'jail birds' and go back to his steel mills at Pittsburgh, giving his job for which he has already shown inaptitude, to a better man."

Moves to Tame Army.

The republic, daring what none dared for many decades, today took action which heralds a determined move to tame and perhaps cut Spain's vast political army, which was always ready, under the monarchy, to direct her destinies to the limit of its talent.

From the ministry of war it was announced today that within a few days 19,000 officers, including 200 generals in an army of less than 200,000 men, will be required to pledge their allegiance in writing to the new régime. Navy officers will be asked to do the same.

This is to meet the situation created by the decision of a group of high officers to remain loyal to Alfonso, acting undoubtedly on his suggestion that they remain in their high places where they could bide their time. It is now expected that these men, who pride themselves, as all Spaniards, on being caballeros, will hesitate to give their word with their tongues in their cheeks.

It was also announced that in all military barracks lectures will be held two days a week on "The superiority of the republic as a form of government." These lectures will be given by officers whose allegiance to the new order has been proved and possibly by politicians of note.

Queen Takes New Residence.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 21.—Historic Fontainebleau, where the great of this world have often sighed and suffered in bygone days, today again became the haven for royalty in distress.

While Alfonso XIII. was off for England, Queen Victoria motored out to that picturesque suburb with her princely brood and installed herself in a hotel suite.

Why the queen chose Fontainebleau, where Napoleon abdicated and bade a tearful farewell to his troops, for an abode is unknown. It is said that despite all those chests full of treasure the prudent Bourbons carried with them from Spain, the royal family is running short of cash and has found it necessary to quit its enormous suite in Hotel Meurice for more modest quarters in a less expensive hostelry.

COOK COUNTY TOWNS ELECT NEW OFFICIALS

Dubbs Wins in Wilmette Battle Over Streets.

In Wilmette Carbon P. Dubbs, who opposed a general street widening campaign, was elected village president over Frederick Newey by a vote of 2,642 to 2,195. It was the thirtieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Dubbs and they went through a second marriage ceremony in their home on the lake shore in celebration of the date and the victory as well.

Bonfires were lighted on the beaches in celebration of the Dubbs victory. One of the new village president's platform pledges was to have elevation of the North Shore tracks without taxation. He was accused during the campaign of favoring the building of apartment houses in the suburb, but denied this.

Wilmette trustees elected are A. W. Froehde, Arthur Lee, and Stacy C. Bennett. The treasurer is Harry W. Miller.

Balloting Is Orderly.

Balloting was orderly in all but a few communities. Particularly was this true of the large towns in the south end of the county, where violence had been feared.

That a contest would be filed over the election in Brookfield was indicated by J. M. Mansfield, defeated candidate for president of the village board. Ernest B. Graham's majority over him was eighteen votes and Mansfield asked that a recount be made by election commissioners. Mansfield claimed that fifty of his votes had not been counted. Trustees chosen in Brookfield are Charles H. Lucas, William E. Fisher, George Love, and William Bendel.

EX-POLICE CHIEF KIDNAPED DURING NILES ELECTION

The only violence reported in the county town elections yesterday occurred in the village of Niles, northwest of Chicago, where William Mandernack, former chief of police, was slugged and kidnaped.

Investigators from the state's attorney's office, directed by Assistant State's Attorney Richard Jackson, found him, with his feet and hands bound and his mouth closed with adhesive tape, in a barn behind the home of Carl J. Wingstrom, a farmer on Milwaukee avenue.

Six men, alleged to have had a part in the kidnaping, were taken into custody.

Mandernack had been active in promoting the candidacy of James Cozak for president of the village board. Cozak was defeated, however, by Edward O. Clark, favored by the other faction.

RICH DOCTOR VANISHES; HUNT KIDNAPER BAND

BULLETIN.

St. Louis, Mo., April 22.—(Wednesday.) —(AP)— A former convict, Edward (Cocky) Leonard, was under arrest today as police and county authorities pushed their investigation into the abduction Monday night of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley Jr. Leonard was booked as an extortion suspect and as having knowledge of Dr. Kelley's disappearance. He said he knew nothing about it.

St. Louis, Mo., April 21.—(AP)—Dr. I. D. Kelley, 45, wealthy nose and throat specialist, was missing today under circumstances which led police to believe he was kidnaped after being lured from his home last night by a telephone call asking for his professional assistance.

A mysterious telephone call was received late today by Chief of Detectives Robert Kaiser giving the laconic but unauthenticated information, "Dr. Kelley is unharmed; is in Chicago."

When Kaiser began to question the speaker, the party on the other end hung up the receiver. A report of the call was made immediately to Chief of Police Joseph Gerk and an unsuccessful attempt made to trace it.

Find Physician's Auto.

The physician's automobile was found at 10 o'clock this morning several miles from the place where he was summoned by the telephone call. Prints from footprints on the floor of the car it appears that two men rode in the automobile with him to the point where it was abandoned. Police believe he was transferred to another car. That the physician apparently thought he was being robbed was indicated by the discovery of his diamond ring thrust down behind the cushion of the driver's seat.

Dr. Kelley was called twice on the telephone last night, his wife, the daughter of the late William Cullen Bryant, wealthy oil magnate, told police.

Caller Says He's Chicagoan.

The telephone caller gave the name of Holmes, Mrs. Kelley said. The caller said he was from Chicago and was visiting here with his nephew, who had been operated on for an ear ailment by a Chicago physician. Mrs. Kelley said the name of the Chicago physician sounded like "Ballinger." There are Chicago physicians named "Bellinger," "Ballenger," and "Hollinger" said today they had treated a patient named Holmes.

The man told Dr. Kelley the patient had a severe ear ache and directed the physician to drive to Davis Park, a western residential suburb.

Wife Demurs at Departure.

Mrs. Kelley said she demurred at her husband leaving the house on a stormy night, but Dr. Kelley said:

"I must make the call," and left hurriedly in his automobile.

The place selected for the abandonment of the physician's car gives credence to the theory that the missing specialist may be in the hands of a gang that has kidnaped several prominent business men in Illinois in recent weeks.

Ten Kidnapings Within Year.

There have been ten kidnapings in the St. Louis district within the year, the most sensational being the abduction last New Year's eve of 13 year old Adolphus Busch Orthwein, the grandson of August A. Busch, and great-grandson of the late Adolphus Busch, wealthy brewer.

Mrs. Kelley is distantly related by marriage to the Orthwein boy.

St. Louis Physician Kidnaped

Dr. I. D. Kelley Jr., prominent St. Louis specialist and son-in-law of late William Cullen McBride, oil magnate, who was lured from his home and kidnaped, according to his wife.

NEW ASSIGNMENTS ON COMMITTEES FOR COUNCIL NOT READY

Miami Beach, Fla., April 21.—[Special.]—Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], chairman of the Chicago council committee on committees, today telegraphed City Clerk Brady informing him that the committee has not completed its report on working committee assignments for the members of the new council. He asked that the meeting scheduled for tomorrow be postponed.

The five members of the steering committee, who have been here vacationing while working on the council organization plan, will leave tomorrow for Chicago.

Mayor Cermak, who appears rested from his campaign, spoke today before a meeting of the Miami Advertising club. He assailed prohibition as he has in other speeches here, and also outlined the taxation problems that confront all large cities in the country as well as Chicago.

The mayor and his aldermen leaving here tomorrow will stop over at Jacksonville, Fla., for a few hours.

Song Writer Indicted on Extortion Plot Charges

True bills charging attempted extortion were reported voted by the grand jury yesterday against Milton Weil, composer of campaign songs for the former city administration. Two others, Robert Emmett Ryan and Joseph Fiore, alleged hoodlums, were also reported to have been named. Judge Padden in the Felony court had indicated on Monday that he would hold the men to the grand jury on the charge that they attempted to extort $1,000 from John E. Collins, manager of Louis Armstrong, colored band leader at a downtown night club.

CHILL WEATHER TO LINGER; MORE RAIN IS ON WAY

While farmers throughout the central states were rejoicing at the heavy rains which had fallen to relieve crops over the area, the weather man last night promised Chicago a continuance of the cool spell that banished the summery temperatures prevailing for most of the month. Cloudy and unsettled weather is forecast for Chicago today, and rain is probable tomorrow, according to C. A. Donnel, government meteorologist. The minimum temperature today is expected to be about 36 degrees.

Chicago got its share of rain yesterday, along with the rest of the middle west, the fall for the 24 hours ended at 7 o'clock last night totaling .73 of an inch. This reduced the deficiency of precipitation for the year to 2.13 inches.

Heavy rains were general over the central portion of the United States from the Canadian border to the gulf coast. Pana, Ill., reported 2.3 inches; Cairo, 1.38 inches; Grand Rapids, Mich., 1.20 inches; St. Louis, 1.08 inches; Evansville, Ind., .86 of an inch, and Milwaukee .42 of an inch.

Continued cold weather, with frost in some sections early today was forecast for the middle west.

SWANSON TRACES FALSE REPORTS AIMED AT BANKS

Sees Effort to Destroy Business Confidence.

State's Attorney Swanson announced yesterday that propaganda which is being circulated by destructive agencies to create a lack of public confidence toward stable business institutions has caused a number of runs on banks during the last week. The prosecutor warned the public to be on guard against persons giving out such information.

Mr. Swanson issued a statement urging all persons who have received such rumors, many of which are being spread through anonymous telephone calls, to make inquiries from reliable sources before paying attention to the reports. The state's attorney also pointed out that the law imposes penalties for the circulation of false rumors as to banking institutions.

Investigations Are Started.

Mr. Swanson's statement follows:

"The state's attorney desires to warn the public, particularly depositors in banks, concerning certain conditions which seem to threaten possibility of serious losses. There have been within the last week or ten days a number of runs upon banks.

"Investigations now under way, and which will be vigorously continued, indicate that these runs were in the main artificially stimulated, mostly through the use of anonymous telephone communications. Among other agencies it is believed that certain subversive organizations whose purposes it is to spread and create dissatisfaction with established institutions, both of government and of business affairs, have undertaken to create in this manner runs upon banks, apparently with the hope that the fear thus created in minds of the depositors will produce a mental attitude which will be fertile for the propaganda of such organizations.

Has Confidence in Business.

"The state's attorney is confident that the business institutions, as well as the banks of this community, are, in the main, sound, in substantial shape, and thoroughly equipped to continue to render service to their depositors without risk of loss.

"The state's attorney would urge that if any such anonymous rumors or suggestions are spread by telephone or otherwise, before attention is paid to them, inquiry should be addressed by the receivers of such alarming suggestion to some qualified authority.

"The state's attorney warns the public that the criminal code in its provisions as to conspiracy imposes a heavy penalty—a maximum imprisonment in the penitentiary for five years—for any person guilty of such attempt to ruin existing institutions upon which the public relies, as well as special statutory penalties for circulating false rumors as to banks."

GREENE, AURORA MAYOR FOR TEN YEARS, DEFEATED

Waukegan Wet Hits Veto and Wins.

Col. Charles H. Greene, who has been mayor of Aurora for ten years, was defeated for reelection yesterday. His opponent, Conrad M. Bjorseth, a grocer, won with a margin of only sixteen votes out of 19,249 cast.

Bjorseth made the tax rate the issue. Col. Greene, a Spanish and world war veteran, has been for some years an advocate of a three way split of gasoline taxes between state, county, and city.

Repeal Veto Waukegan Issue.

Highland Park Elects.

Highland Park's election resulted in a choice of E. B. Metzel for mayor and of Herman Schwery for magistrate. Commissioners elected were Robert Greenslade, Lyle Gourley, and Joseph Taylor. Two men were tied for the fourth commissionership, William J. Brown and Julius Zimmer.

Myron M. Lehman, tinsmith, a war veteran, defeated Earle R. Kelley for the mayoralty of Elgin by a vote of 6,532 to 6,116. Kelley was seeking a third term as mayor. George R. CHICAGO JUBILEE IS PRAISED BY EDITORS OF U. S.

Declare City Has Good Reason to Celebrate.

BY TOM PETTEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—[Special.]—This city is headquarters this week for the men who control the newspapers of the country. Their ideas reflect the ideas of millions of their readers and this afternoon a canvass of representative publishers revealed that Chicago is basking in the spotlight of the most favorable publicity it ever has received.

What do you think of Chicago's plans for a jubilee week next month in which the city will celebrate, as no other city ever has, a revived spirit, commercially, politically, and morally?

The above question was put to a score of newspaper executives from the east, west, north, and south. The interviewer sought a composite reaction to Chicago's right and desire to celebrate and got it. It was:

"Chicago should stage a jubilee—it's a great town and I'm for it."

Event of National Interest.

The majority of the publishers were of the opinion that the jubilee next month would be of national significance.

"Chicago, more than any other city has a right to celebrate at this time," said Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution. "It should celebrate and the whole world with it. Significant events have recently taken place there and I am sure the city will stage a show that will make the entire country aware of its accomplishments. I admire its spirit."

Mr. Howell as well as a number of others interviewed were interested in learning details of plans for the jubilee. The stories they had read had been too brief, they declared.

Senator Arthur Capper of the Topeka, Kas., Capital was enthusiastic about about the coming celebration.

Jubilee Will Go Over Big.

"I like Chicago and I like the idea of a jubilee," said Mr. Capper. "Out where I live we already are getting ready for the Chicago exposition and the people are enthusiastic over the great fair in which they are planning to take part. The idea for the jubilee next month is practical and will interest the entire country. Chicago has the right spirit and does things in a big way. I am sure the jubilee will go over in true Chicago style."

Henry Doorly of the Omaha World-Herald said he was not up on the plans for the celebration but that "I think Chicago is entitled to a real celebration after getting rid of its recent mayor."

"Jubilee," said Mr. Doorly, "can mean a lot of things and the one Chicago is going to stage should mean a lot to all of us."

Editor Wishes Chicago Luck.

"I went to the last World's Fair in Chicago," said George B. Longan of the Kansas City Star, "and I know that Chicago does things right. The jubilee is a splendid plan. If you can bring people into the city from the country and towns it is a good thing. The jubilee also will advertise the city and its accomplishments to the world. I haven't heard a great deal about it yet, but I wish it a lot of luck."

W. J. Conners Jr. of the Buffalo Courier-Express was all for the jubilee.

"Why shouldn't Chicago tell the world it is happy again and what better way than in a jubilee," said the Buffalo publisher. "I think the new administration is to do big things for Chicago. I have not met the new mayor but I have heard a lot about him and know a lot of his friends. I don't know as much about the plans for the jubilee as I would like to, but I am sure it will be a big success. I think every one is glad that Chicago can celebrate."

Fred Shielpin of the St. Cloud, Minn., Times, said he had not read about the plans for the jubilee and after reflection expressed the opinion that "it might be a good idea to wait and see whether there is anything to celebrate." His was the only dissenting opinion in a score of interviews.

The consensus was that the jubilee was a great idea and that Chicago would make it a success.

MAYOR CURLEY, BACK IN BOSTON, SINGS PRAISES OF CHICAGO

Boston, Mass., April 21.—[Special.]—Mayor James M. Curley returned to city hall here today from Chicago filled with praises for that city.

"I know of no place in America where the spirit of the pioneer is better exemplified than in Chicago," said the mayor, who spent the holiday week-end there at the home of Miss Loretta Bremmer, financée of the late James M. Curley Jr.

"I wish it were possible to appropriate sufficient money to send department heads of the city and members of the city council on an inspection trip to Chicago and other cities.

"I rode for twenty miles along the Chicago lake front and passed through parks during the entire distance. Of course there has been racketeering, but conditions will adjust themselves.

"They have one police officer for every 650 of population, whereas we in Boston have one for every 337.

"The real trouble with Chicago and with every city in America is the trail of corruption that comes in the wake of the eighteenth amendment."

HOOVER JOINS IN PLANS FOR CITY JUBILEE

Secretary Lamont Will Be His Emissary.

soon will surpass the splendors of the beautiful cities of Europe. It is an outstanding educational and religious center.

"Therefore, as governor of Illinois, I deem it a privilege to invite not only the people of Illinois and the nation, but representatives of all foreign countries to participate in the celebration of the Chicago Jubilee."

At Springfield the Illinois house and senate adopted and approved separate resolutions acclaiming the Chicago Jubilee. A resolution offered by Senator Thomas J. Courtney [Dem., Chicago] was approved by the senate. It praised the "awakened commercial, business, political and civic spirit of Chicago." A joint commission of ten members will be named to represent the legislature at the Chicago Jubilee.

In Chicago the work of correlating the many features of the Jubilee occupied the attention of special staffs directing the program. So heavy is the response that some selection will probably be necessary. The program as arranged now insures four "big nights," beginning with the inaugural parade on Monday night, May 11.

One of the more important night features is the public inauguration of Mayor Anton J. Cermak, scheduled for Thursday night, May 14, at La Salle and Randolph streets. Originally the ceremony was planned to be held in the city council chambers April 27. This plan, however, has been virtually discarded so as to give the general public an opportunity to participate in the inauguration. This can only be accomplished outdoors, it is pointed out.

Inaugural Committee Named.

Definite arrangements will be perfected by a special aldermanic committee, including Mayor Cermak's secretary, Henry Sonnenschein. The other members are Ald. Jacob M. Arvey [24th], Ald. Dorsey R. Crowe [42d], Ald. John A. Massen [43th], Ald. Frank E. Konkowski [31st], and Ald. Barnet Hodes [7th]. Several of these committeemen are out of town, and it is expected they will complete final details for the outdoor inauguration on their return.

On Monday night will be staged the mammoth inaugural parade which, according to pledged participation at this early date, will be several miles long. It will be a parade outstripping anything of the kind ever held in Chicago. It will be industrial, military, civic, and will represent all Chicago.

Also on Monday night the CHICAGO TRIBUNE will be host to members of a French team which will participate in the American-French International Golden Gloves tournament at Soldiers' field. THE TRIBUNE will also be host to the Chicago-New York team which will compete with the visitors. Leading Chicagoans will also be guests.

On Tuesday night the American-French International Golden Gloves tournament will be staged at Soldiers' field. More than 120,000 persons are expected to attend. Among them will probably be members of the French consular staff in Chicago.

Added features will be displayed by the loop merchants during that afternoon, and all other days of the Chicago Jubilee.

Brilliant Fireworks Carnival.

On Wednesday night, May 13, the lake front will be aglow with a brilliant pyrotechnical carnival already arranged by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. Full coöperation has been extended to the Jubilee by fireworks manufacturers in the city. Engineers of these companies are now designing new color and powder devices to illustrate the purport and intent of the Chicago Jubilee.

Mayor Cermak's inaugural will take place outdoors the next night. This event, it is predicted, will draw hundreds of thousands of visitors downtown. The next two nights will be equally as thrilling as the four preceding. High jinks and civic capers will be the word for those nights, and these events will be augmented with more formal proceedings, now in process of completion.

Announcement of the program for Friday and Saturday nights, May 15 and May 16, respectively, will be made shortly in THE TRIBUNE.

With the program of the Chicago Jubilee already virtually completed as to its main features, the work of sectioning the various events is the immediate task.

Response Amazes Randolph.

"By no means have we everything we need," said Col. Randolph last night in discussing the progress made. "The response has been far more than we ever dreamed of. The Chicago Jubilee seems to have struck the imagination and caught the fancy of our city. The biggest leaders in Chicago desire to coöperate. But the coöperation extends beyond our city limits.

"The suburbs are for the Chicago Jubilee. Other cities are for it. Foreign countries are for it. I expect the Chicago Jubilee will be copied everywhere."

From 9 o'clock yesterday to 6 o'clock last night, several hundred pledges of participation or calls for information regarding participation were received at THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE public service and the Association of Commerce offices.

Up to the closing hour, representing 48 hours of special service, the public service offices accepted twenty-eight entries for floats, thirteen entries for bands, six entries for drum and bugle corps, and six entries for choral groups. These, however, are only a small number of the offers.

The thirty-six senior high school and junior school bands were tendered to the Chicago Jubilee committee. Moreover, according to Maj. F. L. Beals, director of military training in the public schools, the 5,300 cadets of the R. O. T. C. are available for parade duty. The entire school system is available for the Jubilee, said Supt. William J. Bogan. The parochial school system is likewise placed at the service of the Jubilee.

Other contributions to the parade will be made by the police and fire departments. The American Legion will also participate, and the Chicago Federation of Musicians, headed by James C. Petrillo, will furnish a band of 500 expert musicians to lead the parade. The Chicago Black Horse troop will also be a feature, and Boy and Girl Scouts are prepared to do their share.

ARREST INDICTED INDIANA BANKERS AND AN OFFICIAL

Meyn, Groves, 4 Others Accused of Fraud.

PETER MEYN.

Peter W. Meyn, who rose from a public school janitor's job to the presidency of the largest bank in northern Indiana, and Hazel K. Groves, county treasurer of Lake county, president of another bank, were arrested yesterday along with four other bank officials as a sequel to the failure of two Lake county banks last winter.

Meyn, his son, Walter E. Meyn, and three other officials of the First Trust and Savings bank of Hammond were arrested on indictments returned yesterday afternoon by the Lake county grand jury after its investigation of the closing of Meyn's bank, which failed in February with deposits of more than $6,000,000.

Bankers Freed on Bonds.

Groves, president of the American State bank of East Chicago, was arrested on an affidavit filed by Robert G. Estil, the Lake county prosecutor, after the grand jury had failed to return an indictment against him. All six were released on bonds ranging from $5,000 to $40,000. They had appeared at the sheriff's office voluntarily to submit to arrest.

The elder Meyn was indicted for making a $22,000 loan to Groves without authorization from the board of directors. His son, who was a vice president of the bank, and W. Norman Bridge and Clifford J. Elting, assistant secretary-treasurers, were named jointly in another indictment charging conspiracy in larceny and embezzlement of $23,000. Adam H. Dorsch, another assistant secretary-treasurer, was named in a separate indictment charging him with the larceny and embezzlement of $2,500.

Charges Against Groves.

In the affidavit against Groves, Prosecutor Estil charged that the banker had honored overdrafts in his personal account for more than $2,000. Estil said that more than 200 other overdrafts in Groves' accounts had been brought to his attention. Groves' bank was closed last winter.

NAME DIVORCEE IN HEARING ON DOBRY COMPANY

The name of a young divorcee was brought into the bankruptcy hearing before Referee Garfield Charles yesterday concerning the affairs of the D. A. Dobry Securities company, with headquarters in Davenport, Ia., and offices in Chicago, Peoria, and other cities.

The divorcee is Miss Irene Gibson, who lives at 2000 Lincoln Park West. Her name was brought into the testimony during the examination of D. A. Dobry, head of the company, by Michael Gesas, attorney for the receiver. Gesas asked Dobry if any of the company's assets were held under the name of the Gibson girl and her father and mother. Dobry denied they held any of the company's assets.

Dobry, who was reported missing after an involuntary bankruptcy petition was filed against his concern two weeks ago, testified that he had gone to West Baden, Ind., for a rest with Assistant State's Attorney Harry Gable. He said he registered there under an assumed name as a "matter of convenience." Dobry said the Gibson girl visited him there and that he last saw her in Chicago on Sunday night.

Serves 50 Years

John T. McGrath, who for ten years has been assistant postmaster, in charge of finance, and for much longer has served as Santa Claus for Chicago's poor children, yesterday celebrated his golden anniversary in the postal service. Mr. McGrath will be 65 years old today, and because of the dual celebration he was congratulated by postal employés from Postmaster Lueder down to the youngest clerk. Fifty years ago Mr. McGrath began his service as a clerk canceling postage stamps by hand.

Butcher Takes Stand in Murder Trial.

HARRY GOLDVARG.

Harry Goldvarg, who is charged with having caused the burning of his butcher shop at 3649 North Kedzie avenue so that he could collect $3,500 insurance, took the witness stand yesterday in his own behalf in Judge Joseph Sabath's Criminal court. Goldvarg is charged with murder as a result of the death of two small boys who lost their lives in the fire. Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach, who is appearing for Goldvarg, explained that, although he had advised the butcher to tell the whole truth, he did not allow him to plead guilty because the prosecution had refused to accept his contention that the crime is a manslaughter and not murder.

The defense attorneys indicated that they will argue before Judge Sabath today that there was no malice or intent to kill when the fire was started. The penalty for manslaughter is one to fourteen years in the penitentiary.

Admits Paying for Fire.

Goldvarg admitted that he paid $150 in cash to have the fire started when he found that he could not make his butcher business pay.

Goldvarg said that he first got the arson idea from Louis Footlik when he bought the fixtures for his store. He said that Footlik told him if he could not make the business pay that he could always make a profit by having a fire.

The defendant indicated that his co-defendant, Jacob Tatelman, owner of a Roosevelt road restaurant, was not the actual firebug, as is charged by the state. Goldvarg said that Jack Rosow, a waiter employed by Tatelman, was the man who spread the gasoline and made all the preparations for the fire. Tatelman, he said, just looked on. Rosow pleaded guilty in the murder case and turned state's witness.

Assistant State's Attorneys Mal Coghlan and Daniel Covelli are prosecuting the case. Rosow is expected to get some consideration in view of the fact that he helped the state.

Defendant Fails to Testify.

Tatelman did not take the witness stand nor did he offer any witnesses in his behalf. He is relying, it is said, on Goldvarg's testimony to help him.

Martin Borad, another defendant, took the witness stand for the prosecution yesterday. He told of driving Rosow and Tatelman to Goldvarg's store and of hearing the explosion which resulted in the deaths of Jerome and Homer Israelson, 5 and 4 years old, respectively.

CRIMINAL COURT.

Alex Pancsek, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life in the penitentiary; James Mann, attempted burglary, sentenced to 1 to 5 years in the penitentiary; James Doyle, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in Pontiac reformatory; Clarence Enlow, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life in Pontiac reformatory; James Carrano and Joseph Schrenta, burglary, sentenced to 1 year to life each in Pontiac reformatory; Stanley Rosnowski, larceny, sentenced to 1 year in the bridewell by Judge Prystalski.

Ray McDonald, robbery, sentenced to 1 to 20 years in Pontiac reformatory by Judge Charles A. Williams.

Park Superintendent Shot by Friend by Accident

William J. Suwalski, 35 years old, 3118 North Kolmar avenue, 39th ward politician and superintendent of Kosciusko park, was shot in the right heel late last night in a hall at 2650 North Cicero avenue. His wound was treated by Dr. Edward P. King, 5551 Belmont avenue. Suwalski, James Wilson of 4541 Schubert avenue, and two other men were questioned by the Cragin police, but all were released when they gave statements indicating that the shooting was accidental and occurred while Wilson was examining a pistol.

Auto Salesman Charges Threats to Kidnap Him

Edward Arnett, 31 years old, 837 Wolfram street, and Jerry Jordan, 27 years old, 2731 Orchard street, were arrested last night on complaint of Harry Lovingfoss, 839 Diversey avenue, an automobile salesman, who asserted they threatened to kidnap and torture him. According to Lovingfoss, he and Arnett had previously quarreled about a business deal.

Investigator Hagan and Hunt for "Buster."

BY JOHN BOETTIGER.
CHAPTER XIX.

The inside story of the investigation which led to the capture of the murderer of Alfred Lingle shall now be told.

Here is the proof that satisfied Pat Roche and Charles Rathbun that they were at last on the trail of the guilty man, and the proof which finally landed the slayer in their custody.

The previous methods of the detective art employed by the staff had not yielded the man. They had failed just as the investigating authorities had failed in the hundreds of other Chicago gang murders. All the clews had been followed. The grapevine had issued lemons. Suspects had been arrested and had been eliminated. Heat on the gangs had been a public boon, but the secret was still held fast.

Gangster to Catch Gangster.

The borings of the Rathbun-Roche staff had been from above. Now they proposed to bore from within.

In a word, this was the decision: "Set a gangster to catch a gangster."

It was plain that the murderer was well covered up, wherever he lay. But somewhere among the gangs of Chicago there must be men who knew him, and knew of his crime. Therefore it was decided to send a man into the gangs, to be one of them, and to stay with them until he, too, came to know the killer of Lingle.

To find such a man was a hard task. There was danger in the job aplenty, with almost certain death the penalty of being found out. The man must be one who could ease himself into the confidence of gangsters, and by this token he had to appear as tough as they were, and with as colorful a record. It was no job for a church deacon.

Capture Is Main Objective.

The capture of the killer was the main objective of Rathbun and Roche. A number of credible, reliable witnesses who had seen the murderer, and who stated that they could identify him anywhere, that they would never forget his face, were available to accuse the killer, once he was in custody. It mattered little how he was found, or who helped to find him, so long as he was the slayer. The witnesses would do the rest.

When Rathbun and Roche, in October, 1930, at the same time they were putting the pressure on the gangs, decided they must pry into the underworld, they employed several undercover men and tried them out to determine whether they could fill the bill. The first efforts were discouraging. The difficulties of the plan mounted.

John Hagan Man for Job.

Then the fates led them to John Hagan, and at the beginning he seemed a good man for the job.

He had been a Pinkerton man, then the operator of his own detective agency; he had, by the whims of destiny, been accused of crimes, been arrested 35 times for bank robbery—but never tried; he had tasted to the full of the life of the gangs and had been a booze runner across the borders of Canada and of old Mexico; he had served time in Leavenworth penitentiary.

John Hagan knew his underworld: he had entrée to the ranks of the gangsters, in Chicago and elsewhere.

And he was sick of it. That ancient gag of the moralists: "Crime doesn't pay," was in John Hagan's thoughts and he fell across the path of Charles Rathbun and Pat Roche.

Hagan loathes the sight of a stool pigeon, and he made it plain when he enlisted in the ranks of the Lingle murder investigating staff that he would never be a stool pigeon. What he had been in the past, what he knew others had been, what he knew of past crimes and criminals was a locked book that would never be opened.

Hagan said he wanted to revert back to his old detective profession; that he wanted to start out fresh on the Lingle case, and to work on that case alone, letting the dead past lie.

In Kansas City John Hagan is rated as one of the arch criminals of America. Many tales have been told about Hagan, but his side of the story has never been revealed. If he ever writes an autobiography it should prove a best seller, for if ever a life was full of adventure, and violence, and romance, John Hagan's, as he tells it, is certainly that life.

Hagan's Life in Brief.

But he probably will never reveal it, and anyway, this is the story of the Lingle murder case. Nevertheless, John Hagan did tell a little about his past, and this is his story, in synopsis:

"When I was a kid in Kansas City I went to work in a bolt factory. Later I answered a blind ad in a newspaper, and through it got an assignment from the Pinkertons. I stayed with them for 10 years, holding every job up to assistant superintendent.

"In 1919 I started out on my own, and organized the Midwest Secret Service in Kansas City, which I built up from nothing at all into an organization employing 200 men. We represented the western conference of 97 insurance stock companies out of Chicago; the Pullman company from Chicago to the coast, and the Fred Harvey system in the same territory. I was backed financially by William Drennan, a wealthy insurance man.

"Up to 1922 I had never made a nickel except in a legitimate way. In that year I got into a battle with the Kansas City police and the Kansas City Star, and a war was started to put me out of business. Some watchmen we had discharged got into trouble, and the papers said they were Midwest men robbing the business houses we were protecting.

"I was framed from every angle. I spent $100,000 fighting charges against me. I was arrested 35 times for bank robbery, and I wasn't tried once. Some of my friends advised me to get out of town; that I didn't have a chance if I stayed.

"I left the country. I hauled 72 loads of whisky from Canada into Kansas City, and 5 loads from old Mexico. I was using whisky money to fight bank robbery charges. Finally I went to Juarez, Mexico, to live, and I began shipping whisky by the truckloads into Kansas City. I had made a connection with the Old Kentucky Distillery company, and I had charge of 21 smugglers throwing booze across the Rio Grande.

Kidnaped by Policemen.

"Then I was kidnaped by 25 coppers, Mexicans and Americans, and they hauled me across the river into the United States and drove me to El Paso. There I was dumped out of the car, in the middle of the town, and when I picked myself up I found myself surrounded by a delegation of United States marshals, deputy sheriffs, constables, and department of justice agents.

"I spent 26 days in a filthy jail at El Paso and finally was shipped, with a big load of motley prisoners to Leavenworth prison. I wound up in the Leavenworth county jail, where I lay for six or seven days until I made a bond.

"Jesse James, son of the old Jesse, was my lawyer. Then I was tried in Topeka on a charge of transporting and selling an automobile known to be stolen. I figured it was a joke, but I was convicted—on newspaper talk.

Charges a Frameup.

"The government put on a witness, Raymond Tate, who gave his address as Leavenworth prison. He was an auto thief, and he testified that he had stolen a Marmon car in Denver and sold it to me in Kansas City, telling me it was stolen.

"The records showed I had filed title to the car 13 days before it was stolen in Denver, and I had canceled checks to show I had bought it for $1,500, from a bootlegger, but I was convicted, and while the case was was up on appeal I went to Whiz Bang, Okla., where with some partners I had a 2,000 acre ranch which we made the headquarters for wholesale booze deliveries.

"I was arrested, with Cherokee Jack Hart, my Indian helper, with $10,000 worth of booze on us, and for this I was convicted and sentenced to Leavenworth for 18 months, but I appealed and beat this charge.

"In 1924 I came to Chicago and went into the alky racket with Frank Hitchcock, and we went with the Genna gang for a year. During this time the auto case in Topeka went against me, and I was due for a year and a day in Leavenworth. I jumped my bond in the case, but I paid the bondsman his money in cash.

"I kept on in Chicago. I quit Hitchcock and some time later he was killed by the Sicilians. Finally I was taken by the Chicago police, in March, 1928, and I went straight back to Leavenworth.

"I served my sentence and came out on Jan. 11, 1929, being greeted at the prison gates by officers who took me back to Kansas City on a charge of being an accessory in a radio bankruptcy case. I paid a $500 fine and the case was dismissed.

On Trail of Gem Robbers.

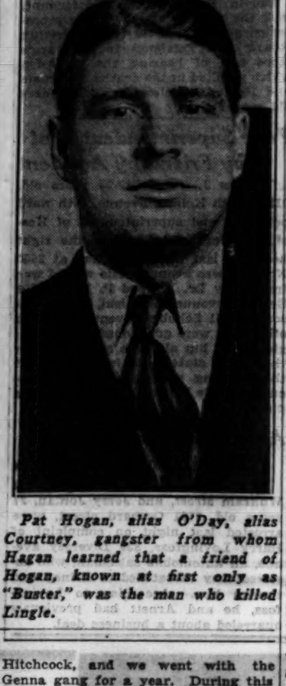
"I stayed in Kansas City for a while in the liquor racket and then I was asked to work on the Pendergast diamond robbery in Kansas City, in which the thieves got $153,000 in gems. I came to Chicago to investigate the fences, to try to get the stuff back, but I didn't score.

"The liquor racket was done with, and I didn't want any more of it. I had only one other place to turn, and that was to get back into the detective game.

"I went to work on the Lingle case and started from scratch."

FURNISH CLEWS TO SLAYER

John Hagan, under cover agent for investigators, who mingled with gangsters and obtained the first information as to identity of Lingle's murderer.



Pat Hogan, alias O'Day, alias Courtney, gangster from whom Hagan learned that a friend of Hogan, known at first only as "Buster," was the man who killed Lingle.

HAGAN GOES TO WORK

Was this a good undercover man for Rathbun and Roche? It was certainly worth a tryout. Hagan went to work, and every move he made he reported to the two leaders of the Lingle inquiry. Every move and every statement made by Hagan was investigated. Hagan invited this. Time and again he would produce a letter, a hastily scratched note, to corroborate his statements that he had connected with the gangs.

The undercover man went to work on Oct. 6, and his first assignment was to contact with the remnant members of the Aiello gang. For weeks Hagan mingled with the Aiello gangsters, even after their lord and master, Joe Aiello, was killed on Oct. 23.

No "rumbles." A rumble, if there are any uninitiates who are unfamiliar with the term, is a whisper among criminals giving information concerning a certain crime.

No "rumbles." Either the Aiello gangsters, by their nature the closest mouthed people on earth, would never give an inkling identifying the killer of Lingle, or else they didn't know who and where he was.

Wide Underworld Acquaintance.

So Hagan left the Aiellos, and he wandered about in the paths of the Chicago underworld. One day he joined in a poker game with a handful of gangsters. Next day he was cabareting until early morning with notorious gamblers. Another day and he would mingle with bandits and robbers. He did have a wide acquaintance among them all.

He went on parties with the gamblers who had been in the Sheridan Wave gambling club, and curried their intimacy.

It didn't come in so many words that so-and-so was the killer of Alfred Lingle. Things don't happen that way.

But finally came a rumble on Paddy O'Day. Hagan didn't know Paddy O'Day, but the rumble was that "Paddy O'Day was in on the Lingle job."

"Paddy O'Day" Investigated.

"Who is Paddy O'Day?" Hagan asked Roche, and an examination of criminal records revealed that this was an alias of a young gangster, some 25 years old, who was also known as "Courtney," and also as Pat Hogan, a hoodlum hailing from St. Louis.

Pictures of Hogan were obtained from the St. Louis police department, and from these it was seen that Hogan did not answer the description of the killer of Lingle. It was evident that if Hogan were really involved in the murder it was as an accessory, not as a principal.

Hagan knew of Pat Hogan. He knew him as a "heavy man" at the Green Mill Gardens, the night club at which Texas Guinan had been holding forth.

Hogan Known as Killer.

He knew Hogan also as a gang associate of Ted Newberry, when Newberry was a leader of the north side gang, and of Benny Bennett, who was missing and had been given up for dead. Hogan was known to Hagan as a killer.

Then a startling development in New York brought the information that Hogan was in New York, and that he was getting into touch there with a former leader of the north side gang of Chicago.

Rathbun and Roche had sent an investigator to New York, to work with the police there in efforts to find some clew in the Lingle murder. Police Commissioner Mulrooney of New York requested Acting Captain Patrick J. McVeigh to extend every cooperation, and the latter assigned Sergt. Michael F. McNamara, one of the best detectives in New York, and Detectives Edward Kerwin and Arthur Schultheiss to work with the Chicago investigator.

In the course of their investigation they placed Julian [Potatoes] Kaufman, one time leader of the north side gang in Chicago, under surveillance. Kaufman had established himself in New York in the booze racket.

The detectives learned that on Nov. 1 a man had called Kaufman's headquarters on the telephone and had said:

"This is Pat Hogan from St. Louis. What do you think of that rat of a hotel manager; he handed me up to the coppers. They came up to my room and got me with a rod."

Kaufman's man replied: "Well, that's what you get for stopping at such a joint. You were told to stop at a real hotel. Meet me at my hotel in an hour."

Trace New York Arrest.

Investigation revealed that a Patrick Courtney had been arrested that day in a hotel on West 72d street with a pistol in his possession, and that Courtney had a record of numerous arrests for murder and other crimes in midwestern cities, under aliases of Patrick Hogan, Larry Murray, Larry Wahl, and John Baker.

With this information proving that Hogan was in New York, and that he was associating with old time members of the north side gang, the decision was made by Rathbun and Roche that Hogan should go to New York at once.

Meanwhile Roche discovered that Hogan had been arrested in New York on a gun toting charge and was awaiting trial. Other information bore out the presumption that Hogan was in New York, and the decision was made that Hagan should go to that city.

Before leaving, Hagan met in a casual manner a hoodlum who knew Hogan, and dropped the information that he was going to New York.

"Hot on Lingle Killing."

"Be sure to look up Paddy Hogan," the hoodlum said. "Tell him you came from me. But be careful of Paddy, because he's awfully hot on the Lingle killing here."

"Okay, boy."

So Hagan left for New York, by airplane, and Rathbun and Roche, with THE TRIBUNE reporter, followed by train, to be on the ground while Hagan was getting in contact with Paddy Hogan.

In New York Hagan got in touch with the gangsters and within three days he met Hogan. They fell into an easy familiarity, and from the first Hogan accepted the other as an intimate. They had recalled meeting in Chicago, and exchanged recollections of notorious men whom both knew.

The two, Hagan and Hogan, went all about New York, and, as Hagan put it, "we cabareted New York to death." Hogan's tongue was loosened many times, and many times he referred to the Lingle case, and told of Pat Roche on the hunt for him. How little he knew he was talking to an undercover man for that same Pat Roche.

Then Hogan mentioned the name of "Buster" several times, and during one drinking bout he said:

"Roche is sure burnin' up for me and Buster. I'm 'hot' for the job all right, but geez, Buster is burnin' up."

Not the first time, but after Hogan had mentioned "Buster" several times, the operative asked casually:

"Where is this Buster? Has he blown the U. S. A.?"

"No, he's in Chicago."

"In Chicago? Why, that's the hottest place in the world for him, ain't it? That's where Lingle was 'pushed.'"

"O, yes, but Buster's safe there. Nobody knows him. He don't mix around the town at all. He's being taken care of by some people of the 'Big Fellow's,' but some of them don't even know who he really is. He's hid like nobody's business."

"The law'd never find him anyway."

"No, he's all right. But he's a damn good man, and we can use him plenty when we need him."

So it was "Buster" who was "burning up" for the Lingle murder! At last a name, if even a nickname, had come, along with the positive information that he was the man who had killed Lingle.

Hagan thought he remembered "Buster" as a "heavy man" who had also worked at the Green Mill gardens with Hogan, but he was not certain about "Buster." As he remembered "Buster," the latter was a tall, well set up young hoodlum, with blond wavy hair. This measured up well with the description of the slayer of Lingle.

Never had Rathbun and Roche been so confident as now that they were at last on the right trail.

TOLD "BUSTER" IS KILLER

Then, in the days that followed, Hagan continued his ramblings about with Hogan and the men associating with the gangster. Soon he reported to the investigators that he had been told flatly, in many ways and by several of Hogan's associates, that "Buster" was the killer of Lingle.

Hagan sought by the throwing out of many veiled hints to discover the whereabouts of "Buster" in Chicago, or his full name, but close as he was to "Buster's" pals they never disclosed this information. There was no basis upon which he could risk a direct question, and he had to be content with listening to whatever conversation was volunteered.

Then the revelations of the Capone "plot" in Chicago forced the return to Chicago of Rathbun and Roche. Hagan was left behind with instructions to keep in constant touch with Hogan, and to telephone any information that he might receive.

Within a day or two Hogan told Hagan that he was going to "take it on the lam" from New York, that the gun charge against him probably would result in his conviction and a prison sentence, and that he proposed to jump his bond. Hagan told the gangster that he was going back to Chicago, and then Hogan said he would arrange for "Buster" to get in touch with him.

Agree to Meet "Buster."

"The kid is busted, and I'd like to set him into a couple of good jobs so he can make some money," Hogan said. "We'll arrange to meet later in St. Louis."

So Hagan returned to Chicago, having agreed to meet later with Hogan in St. Louis, and to bring "Buster" along with him. In Chicago the suspense of waiting for "Buster" to get in touch with Hagan was almost unbearable. Night after night, until far into the mornings, the leaders of the Lingle staff sat in their headquarters, waiting and waiting for news.

But none came. Finally Hogan, in St. Louis, called Hagan on the telephone.

"Can't you come down to St. Louis?" he asked. "I've got some ideas."

"What about Buster?"

"O, we can get him when we need him. Anyway, he's too hot to be traveling around with you. He couldn't stand a pinch, and if you were with him, it'd be that much worse."

Hagan went to St. Louis, and stayed with Hogan there for two weeks, during which time they talked endlessly about various "jobs" they could pull. Many times Hagan was hard put to it not to actually go out on "jobs" with Hogan, but shrewdly he succeeded in putting the ganster off on one game or another.

Frequently Hogan mentioned "Potsy," but he never dropped his last name, nor did he disclose where "Potsy" lived in Chicago. He did drop one bit of information concerning him, however.

"Buster can't come here," Hogan said. "He's hotter in St. Louis than in Chicago. They haven't got him pinned on that Lingle job, but here they got Buster indicted for another murder, and he can't show his face. That's why he blew to Chicago."

But this clew didn't help to establish "Buster's" identity, Many men were accused of murder in St. Louis, and because of the delicate nature of the present situation, Rathbun and Roche dared not to make too many inquiries about "Buster." The clew was hanging on the slender thread of Hagan's association with Hogan, but that thread was fastened in dead certainty, and there was no disposition to strain it, but to allow Hagan to go the full route without interference from any sources.

Plays Game to End.

Eventually Hogan told Hagan that he was going to Kansas City, and proposed that Hagan should go along. But Hagan explained that he would run afoul of the police in Kansas City, and he went instead to Excelsior Springs, Mo., and notified Hogan that he was stopping at the Schanno hotel there. Then Hogan and some of Hogan's pals joined Hagan at Excelsior Springs, and they resumed the constant talk of jobs they had done and jobs they were going to do.

Through all this time, Hogan talked of getting "Buster" down there, so that he might be put in on the "jobs" being planned. Hagan played a shrewd game, and appeared disinterested in whether "Buster" came or not, although it was the one thing that he desired most. Even then he did not know who or where "Buster" was.

Finally Hogan announced that he would get "Buster" to Excelsior Springs the next day, and then came the beginning of the end of the search for "Buster."

JURY ACQUITS THREE OF DETROIT MURDER OF JERRY BUCKLEY

Detroit, Mich., April 21.—(AP)—The question of "Who killed Jerry Buckley, and why?" remained unanswered tonight. A Recorder's court jury returned a verdict of acquittal in the cases of Ted Pizzino, Angelo Livecchi, and Joe Bommarito.

Bommarito and Pizzino were accused of being two of the gunmen who entered the lobby of the La Salle hotel at 1:40 a. m., last July 23, and shot down Gerald E. Buckley, militant crusader for radio station WMBC, two hours after he had announced the recall of the then mayor, Charles Bowles, whom he had attacked in his nightly broadcasts.

Livecchi was accused by the state of signaling the gunmen when the scene was set for the assassination.

Before the defendants could leave the courtroom, Pizzino was arrested for another murder, and Livecchi was taken into custody for Rochester, N. Y., police on a robbery charge.

Tonight's verdict was reached at 7:15 p. m., after 33 hours.

REARREST SHELDON AT LOS ANGELES ON CHARGE OF PERJURY

Los Angeles, Cal., April 21.—[Special.]—Ralph Sheldon, who was one of four alleged gangsters acquitted at Long Beach last Saturday on three charges of assault to murder Long Beach policemen, today was again under arrest, charged with perjury. Investigators from the Los Angeles district attorney's office want to question Sheldon concerning testimony he gave in his trial before a Long Beach jury.

Sheldon yesterday promised Detective Chief Joseph Taylor that he would leave Los Angeles county as soon as he could adjust his affairs.

MRS. CHANNELL SUES HUSBAND; NAMES WOMEN

Denies Charges in Mate's Divorce Suit.

Mrs. Amelia Channell yesterday took steps to oppose the divorce proceedings brought by her estranged husband, Charles A. Channell, former president of the O'Cedar corporation, in an answer filed in the Superior court. Mrs. Channell denies all the charges made by her husband and in a cross bill for divorce she accuses him of adultery, the same charge on which Channell seeks a divorce.

Through her attorney, Bernard W. Vainisky, Mrs. Channell alleges that her husband has been guilty of misconduct with three women. In his bill Channell named I. L. Wise, whom he identified as an "engineer for the Insull interests."

Wife Names Other Women.

Mrs. Channell charges that in the summer of 1929 her husband entertained a woman, "Dorothy," at Twin Lakes, Wis., and in Chicago, and at the Channell summer home at Grand Beach, Mich. In the fall of the same year Channell and a woman friend whom he called "Mary" were together in New York, according to the bill.

During 1930, Mrs. Channell says, her husband frequently was with Edna Mae Reed, for whom, according to the bill, he recently signed a lease on an apartment on North Dearborn street.

Mrs. Channell also points out that two years ago her husband was sued for $100,000 for breach of promise by Miss Ruth Tromley, 28 years old, a former model. The suit was dismissed. Mrs. Channell alleges, only after Channell "paid a substantial sum of money" to Miss Tromley.

In answering her husband's charge of adultery, Mrs. Channell's cross bill says that he had threatened to ruin her reputation if she refused to give him her property.

Charges He Spent Her Money.

Concerning Channell's accusation that his wife and Wise rifled a vault of many valuable securities belonging to him, Mrs. Channell replies that the securities belonged to her. Mrs. Channell says that when her husband's money was gone he spent $250,000 of hers.

She denies that she harrassed her husband and caused him to lose his position as head of the O'Cedar corporation.

The Channells were married on Nov. 2, 1905, and separated last Jan. 3. They have two grown children. Channell, who is 57 years old, lives at the Lake Shore Athletic club and is a member of several other clubs in Chicago and in England.

Wedding Postponed

DOROTHY MACKAIL.

HONONLULU, April 21.—(AP)—Dorothy Mackaill, screen actress, and Neil Albert Miller, assistant horticulturist of the Hawaiian Sugar Planters' association here, said today their marriage would take place eventually.

The actress and the son of a Los Angeles retired business man announced the postponement of their wedding last night a few hours before it was to have been held. Today both insisted there had been no quarrel. Miss Mackaill said she would sail Saturday for Los Angeles. Miller hinted he might follow his fiancée to California and marry her there soon.

Gov. Bilbo's Foes Plan Rump Session of the Legislature

Jackson, Miss., April 21.—(AP)—With an agreement that only financial relief measures would be considered, legislators meeting informally here late today suggested an unofficial session of the legislature to convene Monday to provide $7,000,000 to offset an impending deficit in the state treasury.

The call for the unofficial session was expected to go out to the 159 members following upon a conference here tomorrow of Lieut. Gov. Bidwell Adam and Speaker Thomas L. Bailey, presiding officers of the two branches.

Financial relief measures would be agreed on at the session and then submitted to Gov. T. G. Bilbo, with a request to call a pre-dated extra session which would adjourn as soon as the finance bills are signed by the chief executive.

Bankers Pledge Help.

As the legislators conferred, bankers today pledged $1,900,000, thus staving off threatened bankruptcy which faced the state.

Despite the pledge of the bankers to underwrite the state's "faith and credit" bonds falling due this year, officials said the state finances still were left in a deplorable condition, with the treasury overdrawn by $3,500,000, the state universities and institutions facing a closedown, and employés confronted with work without pay.

The only way out of the difficulty, they said, would be through the call of a special session of the legislature to pass emergency acts. But Gov. Theodore G. Bilbo was reported firm in his refusal to issue the call unless a majority of the legislators signed a pledge agreeing not to impeach him. So far a majority has refused to sign it.

Gov. Bilbo Defiant.

"I'll have nothing to do with such a fool call," he said. "If the legislators want to come to Jackson, transact the people's business, save the state's credit and take care of these suffering school teachers, the insane, and the hard working state employés, then let them sign the pledge for a short session and no political investigations, and I'll announce the call within 30 minutes."

Unless an extra session is called before the new administration begins next January, officials said the state's business virtually would be paralyzed, public schools and the five state colleges would be unable to open in the fall, states employés would be compelled to work without pay and all state work crippled.

Some bankers already are refusing to cash state warrants.

ENEMIES PURSUE WALKER DESPITE SHARP DEFENSE

New York, April 21.—[Special.]—Mayor James J. Walker's sharp and statistical reply to the charges against him today was a matter of public record, but his adversaries have not yet abandoned the fight.

THE REV. J. H. HOLMES.

The city affairs committee, it was learned tonight, is already drafting a rebuttal to the mayor's answer in which "some new charges" will be made and "considerable new evidence" adduced in support of the original complaint.

The committee met today at the offices of Dr. John Haynes Holmes, chairman, and there a long telegram was sent to Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, asking his permission to frame the rebuttal. Any submission of new documents, of course, is predicated on this permission.

The mayor's friends, however, remained confident that the ultimate result of his answer would be exoneration by the governor and a continuation of the present city régime.

The mayor's report to the governor generally was accepted today as a talented sample of political pamphleteering. It was clear and concise; it cited figures and achievements, and, with a neat invective, it turned back attack with counter-attack.

Trying to Get Jobs Back.

Meanwhile Tammany's 70 year old district attorney, Thomas C. T. Crain, on the witness stand in his own defense for the third time in the inquiry into his conduct of office, confessed to Commissioner Samuel Seabury today that he did not investigate a report that Joseph Mezzacapo, alleged head of the cloth shrinkers' union racket, had $300,000 in the bank, even though testimony had been given before him that Mezzacapo extorted money from the weekly salaries of members of the unions he formed.

Mezzacapo's bank deposits totalled $322,000 during a period of almost five years prior to Mr. Crain's investigation, it was brought out today. Mr. Crain apparently did not consider that fact of any significance in his racketeering investigation.

He did not even know that Mezzacapo had been indicted for extortion—an indictment afterward quashed—at a time in February, 1930, when he, as district attorney, was using his offices to try to get their jobs back for several men who had lost them through trouble with Mezzacapo's union, he insisted.

400 Members in Union.

It finally developed that Mr. Crain's interest in the Cloth Shrinkers' union racket was the humanitarian one of getting jobs back for men who had come to him to testify they had lost them because of union conditions. The inquiry faded away when Mr. Crain discovered the whole matter was highly involved and in some aspects more appropriate to civil investigations and suits than to his office.

Mr. Crain did not, however, pursue the possible criminal aspect. According to testimony taken by him on Feb. 18, 1930, and which John Kirkland Clark, as counsel for Commissioner Seabury, read back to refresh Mr. Crain's memory, Benjamin Krivis, a member of the union, answered a question as to why the Cloth Shrinkers' union had been dissolved by saying:

There were about 400 members in the union. "When you were told Mezzacapo extorted money what did you do?" Commissioner Seabury asked.

LAUNCH ATTACK ON LEGALITY OF TRANSIT MERGER

Plan Is Unconstitutional, Court Is Told.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

What may develop into substantial trouble for the city's consolidated transportation program and may be annoying for a long period, appeared in the open yesterday before Superior Judge William J. Lindsay. In his court the hearing started on an application for an injunction to prevent the city's financial participation in the transit program.

Attorney Stephen A. Foster for the two complaining taxpayers, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Bass and Augustus E. Olson, talked throughout the day's session in explaining his contentions, and will probably use all of today.

He declared that the terminable permit law, and the franchise granted by the city council under it are unconstitutional and void. He asked the court to declare that the Chicago Local Transportation company — created to receive the franchise and operate the franchise system—"is not a corporation."

Unconstitutional, Is Charge.

Mr. Foster not only argued the illegality of the permit law, the ordinance and the transportation company, but asserted repeatedly that in certain respects they violate the state constitution and also the basic law of the United States. He apparently was laying the foundation to carry his fight to the United States Supreme court.

In one paragraph of his bill the complainants charge that "the comprehensive traction ordinance violates section 12 of article nine of the constitution of Illinois, in that it will, when accepted, create an indebtedness of the city of Chicago beyond the limitation" fixed in the state constitution."

This same paragraph charges that the ordinance "violates section 14 of article 2 of the state constitution in that it constitutes an irrevocable grant of special privileges and immunities, and violates section 22 of article 4 in that it grants a special or exclusive privilege, immunity or franchise, and violates the separate sections of said constitution, in that it amounts to a donation on the part of the city or to a loan of its credit in aid of a private corporation."

Other Points Are Cited.

The bill also charges that the ordinance "violates section 15 of article 11 of the [state] constitution, insofar as it purports to grant to the grantee a 'terminable permit' which would, according to the terms of the ordinance, constitute an irrevocable contract upon the acceptance of the ordinance and would therefore prevent any forfeiture of the property or franchise of said railroads."

Another charge is that the ordinance "violates section 2 of article 2 of the state constitution and the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States, in that it does not constitute 'due process of law' and if accepted and enforced would deprive these complainants and other taxpayers of the city of their property without due process of law."

The construction of a subway through the central business district is a highly important part of the transportation program. Under the provisions of the ordinance the subway is to be constructed by the city.

Calls Subway Plan Illegal.

Attorney Foster told the court that it is illegal and unconstitutional for the city to spend its $60,000,000 traction fund for the subway. He argued that the permit provides for investing $100,000,000 in subways. The traction fund cannot pay that total, if it were legal to use it for that purpose, he asserted. He said the city has not sufficient borrowing power remaining to borrow the cash to complete the job.

But Mr. Foster asserted that it is illegal to use any of the city's traction fund. That was gathered, he said, for the sole purpose of buying or constructing street railways. After admitting that the fund might be used for a street railway subway, he said:

"The subway proposed isn't that kind. It is a subway for railroads, state and interstate railroads, and for the carrying of freight as well as passengers. By no construction could the fund be used to pay for the concourse of the subway. The subway can not be built by special assessment because it will not be a local improvement and will not benefit property owners adjacent."

Another Suit in Progress.

This same question, building a subway by special assessment, was on hearing yesterday before Circuit Judge Ross Hall, where the property owners are fighting the proceeding to increase the width of North State street, a step preparatory to the building of the subway. Several of the lawyers in this proceeding, after the adjournment of Judge Hall's court for the day, went to Judge Lindsay's court to listen to Attorney Foster's contentions.

After Mr. Foster has concluded his exposition of his bill of complaint the merits of his contentions will be argued. The bill asks that $14,000,000 in city appropriations be declared invalid. They are allotments from the city's traction fund.

The city is represented in the case by Attorneys Walter L. Fisher and Allan T. Gilbert, who were engaged in the drafting of the transportation ordinance and of the enabling legislation.

The suit is said to have been prompted by owners of junior transportation securities who do not like the financial plan of Halsey, Stuart & Co. for a consolidation of the properties.

Topeka, Kas., April 21.—(AP)—Four hundred delegates burst into song when Harry H. Woodring, bachelor chief executive of Kansas, arose to address the state convention of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs today.

"Let Me Call You Sweetheart," the women sang.

Gov. Woodring confessed later he was so flustered he forgot his prepared address.

BUS COMPANY DENIED PERMIT FOR DEPOT LINE

The application of the city Motor Bus company for a certificate to operate buses between the Union and North Western railway stations and the State street shopping district yesterday was denied by the Illinois Commerce commission.

The transportation service now given by the Chicago Motor Coach company and the Depot Motor Bus company is adequate to meet present needs, the commission ruled. If the certificate were granted the present carriers would suffer a loss of revenue that might endanger their financial structure, according to the ruling.

GUARD ADMITS SHOOTING 5 MEN IN PRISON RIOTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—The legislative prison inquiry reopened in the statehouse this afternoon, the committee hearing Guard Arthur Weiss' story of the shooting of three men who tried to escape over the Joliet penitentiary wall Feb. 22.

Weiss said that he had been stationed across the road from the point of escape and had shot all three. He believes he hit them all. The third man was still on the wall when he was killed.

"Was it necessary to shoot this man?" inquired Representative William G. Thon [Rep., Chicago]. "Couldn't he have been stopped without that?"

"Don't see how," replied the guard.

Igoe Questions Witness.

Representative M. L. Igoe [Dem., Chicago] became embroiled in a sharp controversy with the witness when he took over the examination.

"How many men have you shot?" he asked.

"Three."

Q.—Didn't you shoot four? A.—I probably did.

Q.—Why did you say three, then? A.—I misunderstood you.

Q.—Well, who was the fourth man? A.—Fellow named Crook, who was trying to run away.

Q.—You're sure you didn't give him a "Mexican stand-off" (shooting a man and claiming afterwards that he tried to run away). A.—No, he tried to run away.

Guard Produces Knife.

Later he admitted he had shot a fifth man, Convict Marowsky, who attempted to escape from guards inside the prison and start a revolt.

Weiss produced a knife which he had taken from the body of one of the men shot on Washington's birthday. As he left the witness stand and started to leave Igoe said: "Come back here with that knife. I think this man is too dangerous to carry a knife around with him."

"I have authority to carry it," objected the guard.

"This man hasn't the right disposition to carry a knife with him" said Igoe, addressing the committee. "Turn it over to us," he directed Weiss. The guard reluctantly surrendered the weapon.

SEE RACKETEERS IN KNIFE ATTACK ON WINE MAKER

Believed to be a victim of racketeers, Joseph Lagen, 50 years old, a winemaker who lives at 3138 West 47th street, was in a critical condition in Mercy hospital last night as a result of an attack by two men who stabbed him and threw acid on his face as he was going to work yesterday morning.

Lagen told police he had been threatened after he had refused to buy his wine grapes from a dealer who charged $1.10 a box. He said he gave his business to another dealer who charged only 75 cents a box, and blamed the rivalry for the attack on him. He was attacked at 24th street and Prairie avenue as he was on his way to work at the Hydrox plant at 24th street and Lake Park avenue.

KINNEY QUIZZED ABOUT INTEREST ON STATE FUNDS

Law Doesn't Require It, He Explains.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—Efforts to embarrass the Emmerson administration because of the governor's veto of the O'Grady-McDermott state prohibition law repeal-er moved forward a bit today with the appearance of Director of Finance Garrett D. Kinney before a committee of legislators to tell why he does not collect interest on state funds he deposits in large banks.

G. D. KINNEY.

Secretary of State William J. Stratton turned over $17,385 to the state in interest he collected on the $22,750,000 he handled during 1930, having drawn one per cent on daily balances of more than $1,000. The director of finance handled $27,783,000, but collected no interest.

"The question, Mr. Kinney," said Representative Howard L. Doyle [Dem., Decatur], author of the resolution that started the investigation, "is whether you collected interest on these funds and if not, why not?"

Not Required by Law.

"I did not," Mr. Kinney answered. "I followed the procedure established beforehand and placed my funds in places where I knew they would be safe. I didn't ask for any interest."

"Is there anything in the law which says that the director of finance must collect interest?" Kinney, in turn, asked Doyle.

"No, sir; not one thing," the representative replied.

"If it was law, the banks would pay it," Kinney told him.

Later, in questioning State Auditor Oscar Nelson, Doyle brought out that neither is the secretary of state required by law to collect interest, but does.

Pays Debt of Gratitude.

The banks in which Kinney deposits his funds are the Ridgely-Farmers, Springfield; the Continental Illinois Bank and Trust company, and the Freeman-State National banks of Chicago. Gov. Emmerson is a director of the Springfield bank.

To placed his funds in the Chicago depositories, the director said, in return for a favor they had extended the state. This came when Illinois was about to default on its waterway bonds and the banks did not demand payment until the state could afford to pay.

"I felt I should do some thing in return for this," Mr. Kinney explained. "I imagine these banks were earning interest on these funds, weren't they?" asked Doyle.

"I presume they were," Mr. Kinney replied.

"Probably 6 per cent?" Doyle suggested.

Says Banks Made Little.

"I don't think so," he was told. "Money was cheap then." In those days much money was loaned at 3 or 4½ per cent, he brought out.

"But it's true that public money was used for the purpose of earning money?" Doyle asked.

Mr. Kinney remarked that earning money was "the first principle of banking." He turns in his funds, largely gasoline tax collections, to State Treasurer Barrett as soon as the checks are cleared, he said.

"Is there anything to prevent you from turning them in to the treasurer as soon as you receive them?"

"Tomorrow," replied Mr. Kinney, "I shouldn't be surprised if there were checks returned to my office marked 'insufficient funds' to the amount of $140,000. If I had turned them over direct, they would come back to the treasurer and he would come to me and demand the money."

"Do you want us to understand, Mr. Kinney," asked Representative Roger P. Little [Rep., Champaign], the Emmerson floor leader, "that you didn't try to collect interest but that some department heads might do so in the desire to make a better showing?" This was interpreted as a dig at Mr. Stratton.

"I don't say that," Kinney answered.

Mr. Doyle brought out that between September, 1929, and February, 1930, Mr. Kinney collected about $9,000,000 in gasoline funds—paid by gasoline distributors who were fighting the tax before turning it over.

ASKS HOOVER TO CALL PARLEY ON UNEMPLOYMENT

Green Urges Definite Solution of Problem.

Cambridge, Mass., April 21.—(AP)—Calling of a national economic conference by President Hoover to tackle the employment problem was advocated tonight by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Addressing the Harvard Business School club of Harvard university, Green said "If we are to avoid a future repetition of the distressing experiences through which the nation is passing some remedy must be found and something constructive must be done."

National Economic Session.

"It involves more than a question of immediate relief," he added. "The big transcendent question is employment systematized and stabilized.

"For the purpose of meeting the question and of facing responsibility it is my opinion that a national economic conference should be held. This conference should be called by the President of the United States. Outstanding representatives of industry, labor, the government and trained economists should participate in such a conference.

"Work security, better industrial planning, stabilization, technological unemployment and such collateral questions relating to an improved economic order should be subjects for consideration and action.

"Through the cooperation of government in the expenditure of government funds for public construction and improvements with industry, labor and business we should be able to lower recurring periods of unemployment to the irreducible minimum.

"Out of such a conference there should be created a permanent economic council functioning to deal with unemployment and economic problems in a practical and scientific way."

Ask Ford, Others to Hire Idle.

Detroit, Mich., April 21.—(AP)—A resolution to call upon industrial leaders who draw their labor from Detroit to share the city's burden of the supporting families of the unemployed unanimously was adopted by the city council today.

Mayor Frank Murphy, who attended the session of the council, will forward the request to Henry Ford, Fred J. Fisher, Walter P. Chrysler, Walter O. Briggs, William J. McAneeny, Alvan MacCauley and other automobile company executives.

Councilmen asserted that the city could not continue to pay $1,800,000 a month for relief without going bankrupt within a year.

HOUSE GROUP APPROVES BILL TO CURB GUNMEN

Springfield, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—The Schnackenberg concealed weapons bill sponsored by the Chicago crime commission, received a favorable recommendation from a house subcommittee today after Col. Henry Barrett Chamberlin, operating director of the commission, had spoken in its behalf.

Col. Chamberlin pointed out the two principal features of the bill—the provision for punishment if a person removes the numbers from a firearm, as is done generally in gang murders, and the clause prohibiting the carrying of a weapon in an automobile. Frequently Chicago gunmen have escaped punishment because their weapons were on the seat beside them or lying on the floor of their cars.

An amendment was tacked on the bill which allows reserve military and naval officers to carry weapons when they are going to target practice. This was made at the request of the Illinois State Rifle association, represented by Aaron Epstein.

Illinois Aero Commission Bill Goes to Committee

Springfield, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—A bill to create an Illinois aeronautical commission to regulate aviation in the state was referred to a subcommittee of the house judiciary committee this afternoon.

Liberals Plan Fight Today on Dry Law Veto, Income Tax

BY ARTHUR EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—Liberal battlers were shining up the old armor tonight in preparation for further frays over prohibition, income tax, and the repeal of popular primary voting on presidential candidates and national delegates. Senator James O. Monroe [Dem., Collinsville] gave notice to the senate this evening that on the morrow he will take the floor for a few observations on the governor's veto of the prohibition repealer.

JAMES O. MONROE.

Senator Earl B. Searcy [Rep., Springfield] announced his bill would be presented to keep presidential primaries intact. One of its purposes is to indicate that in voting to repeal the popular vote on national tickets the senate had a fast one slipped over it.

Some of the Cook county Democrats who voted for the measure last week said today they were in ignorance that the bill contained the repeal, and that they had been relying on the official digest, the "bible of the legislature," for an outline of the bill's contents.

Senator Monroe intimates he has been priming up on referenda, one of the items stressed in the veto message, and on the trend of government from the people into the hands of organized and vociferous minorities. He expects to point out that Illinois has had three specific referenda on the liquor question.

"In 1922," he says, "light wines and beer carried by a vote of 1,065,242 for and 512,211 against. In 1926 a modification proposal carried by 840,631 for and 556,592 against. Last year the question of repealing the state prohibition act carried by a vote of 1,060,100 to 523,130, and to give it further emphasis, James Hamilton Lewis won for senator on a wet platform by 744,000."

"In the face of all this," added Senator Monroe, "the governor, in his veto, says he would have signed it if it had a 1932 referendum clause attached. How often do the people have to speak to demonstrate they don't mean maybe?"

A similar sentiment was expressed in the house today when Robert W. Woodward [Rep., Chicago] introduced a prohibition repealer with a 1932 referendum. He asked it be advanced without reference to a committee.

A bill to repeal the quo warranto act, which was put through by Gov. Small in 1927, was introduced by A. O. Galvin [Rep., Chicago].

Michael R. Durso [Rep., Chicago] introduced a bill to relieve the double jeopardy in liquor prosecutions through the existence of parallel federal and state laws.

BISHOP CHARGES RUSSIANS STIR UKRAINE TERROR

Says Bolsheviks Seek Wedge in Galicia.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LVOV, Poland, April 21.—Metropolitan Count Andrew Sheptyski [in Polish Szeptycki] looks just like Santa Claus. His curly beard and haird are snow white. He is more than 65 years old, but his blue eyes are bright. Years ago he was a dashing cavalry officer and his brother, recently deceased, was an honored Polish general. His cousin is Count Alexander Skrzynski, Polish minister to the Vatican where he often comes in conflict with the church politics of the metropolitan. The Greek Catholic church recognizes the pope, but retains its Greek ritual and the right of its clergy to marry.

Metropolitan Sheptyski granted an audience on condition that the interview was not to be published with the exception of his statement that he hoped the Ukrainian-Polish conflict would soon be settled. Today he lives the life of an ascetic, devoting his life to the welfare of the Ukrainian people and his enormous wealth—he is one of the wealthiest men in Poland—to the Greek Catholic church. Anything he said at the present time, he declared, would be misconstrued by the Polish press and he did not wish to further complicate the present situation.

Ukrainians Not to Blame for All.

"The question of blaming the Ukrainians for all the terrorist acts perpetrated in Galicia during last summer cannot be proven by Polish authorities," said another bishop attached to the metropolitan's staff. "This year was extremely difficult for land owners. Grain prices fell. Some of the fires were caused by land owners who wished to take advantage of the terrorist acts and collect insurance, and some by Jews who fired their grain stores for the same reason.

"There is a Ukrainian terrorist group, but this is not recognized by the Greek Catholic church, as is alleged by Polish officials. Metropolitan Sheptyski has issued a pastoral letter warning our members that terrorist activities are bad for both the youth and for the cause of Ukrainian autonomy and offered to help youths to leave the society if they would apply to him.

"The metropolitan has also many times said that the acts of terrorism were the work of the bolsheviks, who want to drive a wedge between the Ukrainians and Poles. Today bolshevik agitators are going through the villages telling the people that the soviet government is their friend. We know that if Galicia came under bolshevik rule our church would suffer the same tortures as are imposed upon the churches in Russia, our own included. We are loyal to the Polish government, although the Poles profess not to believe this. We are willing to coöperate with the Polish government, but are not given the opportunity.

"We do not blame Pilsudski for our persecution. The marshal is too far away from the government. He says he is a democrat, but for five years he let his staff of colonels govern Poland. They are partly responsible for the present situation.

Accuses Polish Church.

"It is also tragic that another element enters into this conflict, the party of National Democrats, which comprise the ultra-right and most chauvinist element of the Polish Catholic church. They have also been provocative of trouble, for despite the fact that we joined the Roman church in the sixteenth century, receiving the right to preserve the Greek rites and for our clergy to marry, there is an element in the Polish Catholic church which wants to swallow us. Four hundred of our churches have been turned over to the Catholics and now the archbishop of the Roman church in Lvov province wants 600 more. This is another cause for bitter strife.

"The National Democrats are also partly responsible for the closing of 2,400 Ukrainian schools whose teaching is now in Polish, and which are instructing in Roman Catholicism. The attitude of this chauvinistic group is that it will be sufficient to change the religion of the Ukrainians to Polish and they will become Poles. There was no expression of sympathy from any Polish Catholic clergyman for our sufferings under the pacification policy.

Calls Poles Intolerant.

"The Poles claim to be a tolerant people, but in this section both before and after the war the intolerance was deep. There is too much hatred between the peoples. The Poles also accuse the Ukrainians of obtaining aid from Germany. This is untrue and cannot be proven. Our faith in fair treatment has been destroyed, beaten out of us with a rubber hose."

DIAMOND INDICTED AS LEADER OF GANG IN TORTURE HOLDUP

Catskill, N. Y., April 21.—[Special.]—Jack "Legs" Diamond, notorious gangster, who a score or more times in the past has eluded New York City courts, was arrested today at his home at Acra following action by a grand jury of Greene county farmers.

JACK [LEGS] DIAMOND.
[Acme Photo.]

He was indicted for second degree assault after Grover Parks, truckman of Cairo, N. Y., had testified before the grand jury he was held up and tortured by members of Diamond's gang last week.

James Dalton, one of Diamond's lieutenants, was also indicted on the same charge. He is believed to be in New York. A subpoena ordering Diamond to appear before the grand jury was served on him following his arrest.

District Attorney Gardner explained that Diamond was arrested to make sure he would appear before the grand jury which since yesterday has been investigating the attack on Parks.

Parks, according to his story, was ambushed while driving a truckload of hard cider along the highway near Acra. He charged that he was seized by men belonging to Diamond's gang, strung to the tree and tortured, burning matches being applied to the soles of his feet.

BIGAMIST'S TWO WIVES WILLING TO SHARE HIM

Approve 11 Year Old Triangle in Court.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 21.—[Special.]—Thomas C. Caldwell, 40 year old automobile mechanic, who for 11 years has been living with two wives and supporting two families here, was placed on trial today in the Juvenile court. After hearing his strange story in which he was supported by both the wives, Judge John F. Geckler took the case under advisement until April 27. Both wives in court today continued to profess their love for Caldwell. Twenty years ago in Spencer, Ind., Caldwell said, he married his first wife, Mrs. Nona Caldwell, who is the mother of Sherman, aged 19, and Dorothy, 10. Nine years later he "married" Mrs. Mary Caldwell. They had two children, Thomas, 11, and Mary Jane, 19 months. The two families lived near each other in Spencer, later in Terre Haute, and for the last eight years here. Caldwell visits each family at least once a week; sometimes three times a week, it was testified in court.

Each Wife Knew of Other.

"I knew he was married when I married him," Mrs. Mary Caldwell told the judge. "I knew all about his other family and I approve entirely."

Mrs. Nona Caldwell testified, "I knew when he started going with wife No. 2. I knew when her babies were about to be born. I didn't object, because I knew sooner or later that affair would break up."

"What do you intend to do?" the judge asked Caldwell.

"If I have my way," he replied, "I will just go on supporting the two wives and two families like I have been."

All would have gone on without interference by the law if Juvenile court authorities hadn't checked up on Caldwell for school records. Both wives testified that their children do not understand fully the Caldwell tangle.

"Sanitarium" His Excuse.

When Caldwell chose to shuttle from one home over to the other for a few days it was merely explained in this wise by the wife being temporarily deserted, "Papa is going to the sanitarium for a few days." And that was that.

"I really got worried about affairs two years ago when the doctors told me I had heart trouble," Caldwell remarked to the judge.

"I think that heart trouble began about eleven years ago," replied the judge.

Soundly built to serve you long and well

If you could see the new Chevrolet Six being built, you would understand why it performs so well, lasts so long and brings so much satisfaction and pleasure to its owners.

Visitors to the Chevrolet plants marvel at the care and precision with which the Chevrolet Six is made. They find that the quality of raw materials is held to standards unsurpassed anywhere in the automotive industry. They see many remarkable machines and processes developed by Chevrolet and used by Chevrolet exclusively. They learn that in the manufacture of the engine alone there are hundreds of separate inspections! Pistons are weighed individually, matched in sets to within one-half ounce and then are fitted by hand to three one-thousandths of an inch clearance. Piston pins must be within 1½ tenths of one one-thousandth of their specified size. These pins are first carefully ground, then burnished and finally chrome-plated so that they have a surface as smooth as the finest glass.

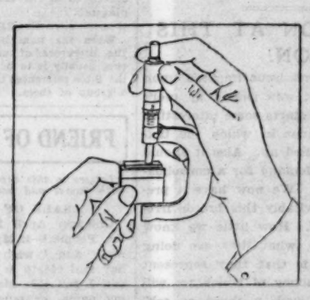
Connecting rods are matched in sets of six to within one-quarter ounce and, after precise machining, are individually fitted by hand to the crankshaft. The special alloy-steel crankshaft is the subject of truly amazing care and precision in manufacture. All bearings must be lapped and rolled, and are not allowed to taper over their length more than one half of one one-thousandth of an inch. If they are out-of-round over one quarter of one one-thousandth of an inch, the crankshaft is scrapped. After being machined, the crankshaft is checked for dynamic balance in apparatus specially developed for this purpose by the General Motors Research Laboratories. This machine indicates with marvelous accuracy the exact amount and direction of any out-of-balance. Before any crankshaft is accepted it must show a dynamic balance within ½ inch-ounce of perfection.



Chevrolet precision instruments are regularly checked against master gauges which are accurate to one millionth of an inch

These few examples of Chevrolet manufacturing standards serve to indicate the solid worth built into every part of the car. Many of these operations could be less accurate and less painstakingly carried out—but the Chevrolet owner would not get the long life, the dependability, the smoothness of operation and the remarkable economy that he now enjoys in the Chevrolet Six. Soundly built to serve you long and well! No compromise with quality in manufacture means no compromise with satisfaction in ownership.

THE PRICE OF LATIN AMERICAN TRADE.

If the administration's new Caribbean policy is justified by anything more than sentimental pacifism, the argument probably runs as follows: We must build up good will in Latin America so that our goods will find a more favorable market. The protection of American lives and property occasionally means the intervention of American armed forces in backward regions; and that in turn destroys good will elsewhere, and therefore injures our export trade. Therefore we will not protect life and property.

That argument is frequently heard but seldom supported by trade statistics. The fact is, of course, that kindly sentiments as between nations are only one factor, and generally a not particularly important one, in the establishment of trade relations. Occasionally, as in India today or in this country in the revolutionary era, political hostility is reflected in commercial statistics, but for the most part the relations between governments do not seriously disturb the habit of buying where price and credit arrangements are most favorable.

A realistic survey today would show that our exports are not as large as they might be, chiefly because Latin America has a curtailed purchasing power. Nearly all the basic commodities of commerce are deflated in price, but none has been harder hit than tropical and subtropical products, notably the coffee and sugar of the Caribbean. No doubt the countries to the south will recover in time, and, other things being equal, considerable advances of money to them would be justified even under present conditions; with these credits Latin America could and would buy manufactures and services in our markets.

But unless there is some assurance from our government that these advances to governments and individuals will be reasonably safe from confiscation, American and foreign bankers and investors will maintain a wholly justified caution with respect to Latin American flotations. In addition American companies will hesitate long before investing in Latin American subsidiaries. Latin America might regard the United States as the home of all the virtues and American goods as incomparably the best and cheapest in the world, and still our trade would languish if credits were lacking.

This fact is well understood by responsible business men in Central and South America. To the extent that it is understood no intervention has been required in the stronger, more stable countries. Mr. Stimson's policy, if persisted in, will work injury both to Latin America and to this country.

DRY TRICKERY IN ILLINOIS.

The people who are trying to repeal the law for the primary vote on presidential candidates would be on another footing if they were proposing a general restudy and revision of the whole system of nominations. Inasmuch as no such thing is in mind they are suspected of peculiar political purposes when they set upon one of the primary acts which is least open to objections. It provides a method of sounding the popular will and is simple, workable, and well designed to do what is expected of it. It alone is selected for repeal. It is to be dropped and the system where found questionable is to remain untouched.

Such peculiar proceedings question the integrity of the persons engaged in them. The senate has passed the repeal bill. The house of representatives will reject it if regard for political square dealing prevails. There is no legitimate reason for this reversal of method at this time. Consequently the cause is to be sought in political jobbery. From all indications it is traceable to the rural drys of the state who think to do Mr. Hoover a good turn by preventing a primary vote on Republican candidates before the convention.

Illinois has elected a United States senator opposed to prohibition. It cast over a million votes for the repeal of the state prohibition act. The legislature passed a repeal of that law. The inference follows that the state adopts the full report of the Wickersham commission as the majority of its members wrote it in their separate opinions and indorses the finding of fact made by the investigators. It further follows that the majority in the state is not in accord with the decision of the administration to discard the report and stand pat on national prohibition.

Dry doctrine contemplates minority rule when it is possible to maintain it by disfranchisement. Hence the nullification of the Illinois constitution to retain rural votes which legally must be given to Cook county. The presidential primaries will permit majorities to elect and instruct delegates to the Republican national convention. To prevent that the drys would repeal the law which permits it. As evidences of this policy of repression and coercion increase, the state will better understand the temper of the prohibition squirearchy. Its morality is that of crooked gambling.

EQUAL REPRESENTATION IN THE COUNCIL.

The restoration of responsible government to Chicago could hardly be better exemplified than by the remapping of our wards. Chicago's case for reapportionment of its representation in the state legislature and in congress suffers at least morally from our failure to establish equal representation in our own municipal legislature. There is the same gross inequality in the council we complain of at Springfield, and the city council committee on committees which proposes to correct them will have the support of public opinion for an honest ward map.

The shift and growth of the city's population have created a situation in which citizens in one ward have much greater weight of representation than those of another ward. Thus 33,791 citizens of the 20th ward have one vote in the council, while 150,886 citizens in the 39th ward have one. In other words, a citizen of the 20th ward has about four and a half times the weight in the council that a citizen of the 39th ward has. The twenty-five smallest wards of the city with a population of 1,208,900 have the same number of aldermen as a population of 2,166,300 in the other twenty-five wards, or one-third of the city's people have the same representation as two-thirds.

This inequality is a partial disfranchisement of two-thirds of our citizens, but its evil is not fully expressed by arithmetic. It is in some of these small wards with disproportionate strength in the council that the most flagrant political conditions prevail. Their level of education and civic intelligence is lower than that of the larger wards. They are more easily controlled by unscrupulous politicians. In other words, their weight in the council is in inverse proportion to their contribution to the welfare of the community.

This is an intolerable condition which materially adds to the problem of good government in Chicago and should have been corrected long ago. Organized politics has prevented this. The council now appears to be ready to act and public opinion should insist upon thorough and uncompromising action. The population of Chicago is now 3,375,329. If divided equitably each ward would have about 87,500 people. If exact equality is impracticable, concessions should be very slight. The people of Chicago are entitled to equal representation and the council will be held to strict accountability for establishing it. If any discrepancy is allowed it should be in favor of districts which are growing and not to those which are declining.

A REAL INTERNATIONAL CLASSIC.

Weather permitting, the international Golden Gloves tournament between the French amateurs and the American boxers of the Chicago area will be held in the stadium at Soldiers' field May 12. If it can be held out of doors 100,000 additional spectators can be seated. Spring, be good. Herol Egan of THE TRIBUNE Paris staff warns THE TRIBUNE sports department and through it the country to beware the French boys throwing gloves. France has been nicely combed to select these champions, and Mr. Egan says they are good, very good. They have speed, endurance, and science. They know boxing and they are tough. That was expected of them.

The sports department rallies from the shock of Mr. Egan's intelligence in the finest Horatian spirit. Chicago will take on all of France with a bit of help from Cleveland, Rockford, etc., as the Roman gladiators once stood against all comers within and without the empire. That's the spirit, even if the Roman gladiators were all from Cleveland. Up and at 'em, Spartacus, and forget the chains that dragged you into the training camp.

CONSOLIDATION AT THIS SESSION.

The discovery that a bond issue imposed upon the people of Irving Park was passed by more votes than were registered starts some interesting speculation upon the manner in which the taxpayer's burden has been piled up. Also it should give added weight to the demand for a consolidation of our taxing bodies. We now have a preposterous number and inevitably this breeds irresponsibility and chicanery. How little we know of these obscure agencies, what they are doing and why! All we know is that they represent a large waste of public money of which we will rid ourselves if there is such a thing as self-government or responsible representation.

The substantial interest of every man and woman of the community in the consolidation of these taxing bodies, now being urged upon the legislature, has not been realized. But under pressure of hard times and mounting taxation, opinion is awakening and the legislature should realize that it will be held accountable for relief. Consolidation legislation should not be postponed at the behest of job holders and politicians. It should be granted now. The need for it is unquestionable and acute.

The Other Side

GOVERNOR EMMERSON'S VETO.

[Danville, Ill., Commercial-News.]

Naturally an outburst of indignation and verbal abuse follows upon the heels of the veto by Gov. Emmerson of the legislative bill designed to repeal the prohibition laws of Illinois. Much of the caustic criticism comes from members of the legislature who supported the bill. Whatever the merits or faults of the measure, abuse comes with poor grace from legislative quarters. The governor is an integral part of the law making machinery of the state, and he has the constitutional right to approve or veto any bill passed by the legislature. He owes no apology for his acts.

It must be admitted on all hands that Gov. Emmerson displayed admirable courage in withstanding the terrific pressure that was brought to bear upon him from wet quarters, especially from Chicago. Neither threats nor promises moved him from doing what he considered his plain duty. No man will accuse him of acting from other than pure motives, whatever may be said of his judgment.

Legislative opinion of the vetoed bill was not by any means overwhelmingly in favor of it. A change of one vote in the senate would have defeated it, and of the twenty-six votes cast for the bill eighteen were cast by senators from Chicago and Cook county. The twenty-four votes cast against it were from downstate.

The action of the governor probably ends efforts to wipe out the state prohibition laws until a new legislature meets in 1933. Oceans of water will flow under the bridge during the interval, and no man knows what issues may arise in the meantime.

TO AVOID MENINGITIS.

IF people want to escape epidemic meningitis there is one rule to follow. It is to keep out of hot rooms that are crowded with people. Probably it would be better to split this up into two rules—one relating to hot rooms and the other to crowds. Any person who will carry out these small rules religiously can be guaranteed against epidemic meningitis.

The London Lancet fixes 71.6 degrees as the deadline. The disease does not spread in rooms that are colder than that. Whenever that temperature is exceeded meningitis becomes a possibility. The danger is from the people in those rooms. If a man was the sole occupant of a hot room he would be in no danger of catching meningitis, even though at some time or other a crowd had been in the room.

The coccus is spread from person to person and not from things to persons. Those cocci that get on things do not live long, even though the air be warm. The function of the hot room seems to be to make possible the transfer of the infection from one person to another.

The other requisite is crowding. The coccus travels from nose to nose, but only when the distance is short and the air is in proper condition for travel.

Ten cases of epidemic meningitis were proved to have come out of one recreation room in Glasgow. A crowd of young men in a warm room, playing basketball or watching a game, makes a fine setting for some cases of meningitis. Crowded playrooms, assembly rooms, mess halls, dormitories, and barracks are the situations out of which come most of the meningitis.

Given a wet, cold day, in which a student body is held indoors by the inclement weather, a large number of students, especially men of say sixteen, gathered in a too small hall, playing games or crowding around a ring in which two of the number are boxing or wrestling, or assembled around an organ singing, or sitting in on a picture show, and the setting is just right for the disease. A big base burner stove in such a room, overheating the air around it, while that near the windows is cold, increases greatly the danger of meningitis.

Another situation that is very dangerous is this: Barracks in which the men sleep in one large room. They sleep on iron beds, arranged double deck, and with narrow passageways between tiers.

Another is the flophouse or bunkhouse with double deck bunks arranged in tiers with narrow passages.

MOLES ON FACE.

M. T. K. writes: What causes moles to come out on my face? I am 29 years old. Can they be removed? My mother and brother have the same trouble.

REPLY.

The tendency to develop moles is inherited. A person is born with that tendency. We know that moles are due to abnormality of the pigment area of the skin. Beyond that we do not know anything as to the cause. And that's a poor answer to your question.

They can be removed. Sometimes it is good judgment to remove them. More frequently it is not. If removal is attempted it should be by electricity or by cutting. Half way measures result in cancer.

BLACK PLAGUE.

Mrs. R. G. writes: What disease is referred to in the Holy Bible as the black plague?

REPLY.

When the term black plague is used in the literature of ancient times the reference usually is to bubonic plague. However, the Bible references to disease generally cover a group of them.

SALE OF PROPERTY.

Chicago, April 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. My wife is 6,000 miles away and I wish to know how I can buy real estate in her absence. 2. How can I sell it? May I simply use only my name, or must both sign? Can I sign another person's name acting with power of attorney? 3. I bought property through a real estate salesman on another's name and I acted as attorney in fact. 4. A real estate salesman won my confidence about a year ago and asked to make a loan of $200, having me sign a bond for him. I accepted and he fixed it up with the lawyer and they made me sign a note and a paper en blanc which they said was a bond, but after the expiration time I found it was a mortgage on the property. 5. Had they a right to tie that on somebody else's property? Must I pay the $200 without security when they had bad intentions? 6. They got a check from a loan maker drawn in my name and some one indorsed that check other than myself. What can be done?

M. P.

1. Her absence would not complicate the deal if you have the money.
2. Her signature would be necessary in order to convey a clear title to Illinois real estate, unless she has appointed an attorney in fact to act for her.
3. Your statement is not clear. In order to secure advice of much value, you will have to have a personal interview with a lawyer who can dig out the facts.
4. A person who is able to read is legally presumed to have read a document that he has signed, so that you would have no remedy unless you could show that they prevented you from reading it or that they affirmatively misrepresented.
5. We do not understand.

GUILTY OF EMBEZZLEMENT.

Chicago, April 20.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—On Saturday, March 28, I made a deposit in a certain bank at 8 p. m., which was after bank clearing hours, and it was recorded as March 30 in my deposit book. On March 30 this bank did not open for business and it has been closed ever since then. I would like to know if they are not compelled to return my deposit to me because of the date that was put down.

THE BADGE IS A DEWDROP IN THE HEART OF A ROSE.

About every mail there are letters bitterly upbraiding us for being wet, and other letters shedding bitter tears because we are genially disposed towards the drys. It is hard for us to make it clearly understood that we are neither Wet nor Dry. We are Damp. The Wets and Drys both at one time or another give us a pain in the neck. But from the Damps we receive the most cordial support and the warmest approval. Of course that is due in a measure to the fact that we are the only one in our party. But we shall soon institute a rousing campaign for new members and expect the party to grow so fast that our leadership will come in for severe criticism and we will be thrown out bodily. Oh, well, in that case we shall organize still another party.

Just what is a Damp, you ask? Well, we haven't drawn up the platform of the party as yet, but so that we will not suffer from any misunderstanding we would say offhand that a Damp gladly and gratefully accepts cocktails or highballs, but does not brag about his bootlegger being in jail. We'll think up more distinguishing signs of the genus Damp as we go along. However, a Damp is not in favor of hanging Wets or sending them to jail for life; nor does he think a Dry is necessarily an enemy to the human race.

He was born before the daylight
And he played the lyre at noon;

Thus the silly little bounder
Who could never act his age
Got himself elected founder

Thus in frantic emulation
Each has set himself the task
Of attaching to his baby
All the strings of Hermes' mask;

Thus through countless generations
While the world remains entire,
All imaginative parents
After him shall play the liar.

WAIT TILL THE GANG SEES HIM

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 22, 1915.

LONDON.—Railways from Germany into Belgium are crowded with troop trains. The soldiers are young, vigorous, and finely equipped Germans and Austrians, who are literally being poured toward the western front. It is generally felt that the great battle in Flanders is at hand and that the extraordinary activities indicate the initiation of a desperate German offensive. The allies have prepared to meet the crisis. The British force in France, which at the beginning of the war consisted of six divisions, has been increased to 36 divisions or, roughly speaking, 750,000 men.

WASHINGTON.—Polite but unmistakable exception to the German government's criticisms of the foreign policies of the United States is given in the reply which the administration made today to the memorandum submitted by Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador. The note refuses to put any embargo on the sale of arms, holding it would be an unneutral act to prohibit the exportation of arms for the reason that such an embargo would be a discrimination in favor of the Germans.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—Theodore Roosevelt, bristling with pugnacity, explained in four hours of stormy testimony that he had been moved to brand William Barnes, the Republican leader, as a link between crooked business and crooked politics only after upright senators and honorable gentlemen had confided to him some amazing political secrets. Among the names which dotted his testimony were those of Senator Davenport, William Loeb, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Theodore Douglas Robinson, and Ex Gov. Sulzer. He said he never meant to say Mr. Barnes was corrupt personally, but was convinced he was uttering the truth when he charged that corruption and rottenness in the state government were due to the influence exerted by Barnes and Murphy.

APRIL 22, 1901.

CHICAGO.—A huge iron tank broke from its supports on the roof of the Galbraith building, 215 Madison street, crashed through six floors to the basement, and caused damage estimated at $45,000. Two persons were seriously hurt and five others had narrow escapes from death.

CHICAGO.—John Backer, 4165 South Halsted street, a saloonkeeper, is a foe of cigarets and therefore an unexpected ally of Lucy Page Gaston. Backer's antipathy to cigarets is well known to habitués of his place. In many respects his saloon is a unique one. Profanity is prohibited and only a limited number of drinks will be sold to a patron. The place is closed at 9 o'clock each evening. "There is no reason why a man cannot be a liquor dealer and a Christian," the proprietor declared. "The use of cigarets has been prohibited here since the establishment of the place."

MANILA.—In an interview, Aguinaldo expressed high admiration for American soldiers, and when asked if he desired to visit the United States he replied: "Yes, greatly, but I am at the disposition of the authorities."

PEIPING.—It is officially reported that Gen. Reid sent Maj. Browning of the British army and a company of Punjab infantry to disperse a band of robbers near Ching Wang Tao. A combined force of Boxers and robbers attacked the expedition, killing Maj. Browning and one soldier and wounding several others.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 22, 1881.

CLINTON, Ill.—An express train on the Rock Island division of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railway, without the slightest warning, broke through a bridge and was precipitated into Meredosia river, a mile below Albany. The river is now at a very high stage. The engine and tender, with the engineer and fireman, went down out of sight and have not been seen since. Eight persons lost their lives.

LONDON.—The following is the clause in Lord Beaconsfield's will relative to the disposition of his remains: "I desire and direct that I may be buried in the same vault in the churchyard at Hughenden in which the remains of my late dear wife, Mary Anne Disraeli, created in her own act Viscountess Beaconsfield, were placed and that my funeral may be conducted with the same simplicity as hers was."

THE SACRED MOTOR CAR.

Chicago, April 18.—As a TRIBUNE subscriber I frequently wonder why you slip in a punk editorial among other good ones. Three of your editorials today are good; then you trot out a silly tirade against the rights of the mass of the public to street car transportation between Chicago avenue and the Navy pier. I myself am a motorist of years of experience in driving my own fully paid for automobiles in practically every part of Chicago and Cook county, but I deplore the mental attitude of many persons who seem to regard motor vehicles and motor vehicle traffic as in some way so inherently sacred that other forms of transportation should be removed from our public streets and roads.

The solution is the elevation of Lake Shore drive at Chicago avenue or the depression of the street car tracks there. Let the Lincoln park board, which is well fed by taxes, and the wealthy minority who never ride in street cars pay the additional cost of elevating Lake Shore drive at Chicago avenue.

R. E. LITTLE.

CAR TRACKS ON THE LAKE SHORE.

Chicago, April 19.—I have been following the efforts of the Lincoln park commissioners to have the car tracks removed from the Lake Shore drive to permit free development of the connection between the north and south drives. The Chicago Surface Lines contend that removal of these tracks will take away from the taxpayers and car riders an easy way to get to the pier. I would like to have some one inform me why these tracks could not be placed on Fairbanks court. In this way the car riders will travel approximately the same distance as they do now, only they would have to ride down Grand avenue from Fairbanks court east. This scheme would permit all Grand avenue and Chicago avenue cars to go under the drive at the new grade crossing on Grand avenue now being built. If necessary an extra track could be laid on Grand avenue for this short distance.

S. A. JACQUES.

THE AMERICAN RIFLE.

Chesterton, Ind., April 12.—Kindly permit me to correct some of the statements made in your editorial, "A New Rifle for the American Soldier." I cannot permit your condemnation of the present U. S. army rifle to go unchallenged.

You say that this rifle is antiquated; that it was antiquated in 1918, "as every one knew who was familiar with firearms." The exact contrary is true. This rifle was and is right down to this year of our Lord the most accurate and, with the exception of one detail [the sights], the most up to date rifle in use in any army in the world—and every one who is familiar with progress in firearms knows it.

You make an issue of the fact that at each discharge of the present rifle the aim is lost and must be again taken for the next shot. Well, I wish to assure you that the same holds true with any automatic or autoloading rifle—the shock of the recoil is sufficient to disrupt the aim, which must be corrected for each successive shot unless one is simply firing for general results and indiscriminately spraying bullets over quite an extensive bit of landscape, and that is not the function of the individual rifleman but rather of the machine guns and the automatic rifles already in use. The individual rifleman is supposed to fire carefully aimed single shots at single targets.

Upon one point I can heartily agree with you and that is in condemnation of the ultra-conservative practice of the officers of our ordnance department in delaying the adoption of any new or improved principle—with especial emphasis on the matter of the rear sight on the present rifle, which is but little if any better than the Buffington, model 1911. A modern rifle should be equipped with an aperture [peep] sight mounted on the bridge of the receiver, close to the eye. With such a sight our present Springfield would be in a class by itself, far and away ahead of any other military rifle. In fact, it is so good that it is generally conceded by sportsmen and big game hunters to be superior to any commercially produced hunting rifle when fitted with modern sights and with the stock trimmed down.

The average reader—that is, the man unfamiliar with these matters—will infer from your statements that this country is about the only one which has not adopted some sort of automatic or autoloading rifle for the infantry soldier, while the fact is that no nation has so equipped its army.

To justify myself in thus criticizing your statement, I will say that I served as a machine gunner for more than two years in the Canadian army during the early part of the war and later served as an officer and instructor in small arms practice in the United States army. Prior to the war I had more than twenty years of military service, specializing in musketry, and have participated in fifteen of the national matches at Sea Girt and Camp Perry up to and including last August.

HERBERT W. MCBRIDE.

APPROVAL OF THE VETO.

Chicago, April 19.—Not one of the governor's critics has made any statement of facts showing how the repeal of the prohibition acts would improve present conditions. The governor's opinion is that the repeal would only make matters worse than they are. That is also my opinion. Just where would the improvement come in if we had no laws at all to control the liquor traffic?

CAMERON A. BIGELER.

SUPPORTING THE CONSTITUTION.

Chicago, April 20.—If the governor wants to support the constitution so nobly as he stated in his veto message, why, a short time back, did he disapprove of Cook county having its proper reapportionment, which, according to law, we are entitled to every ten years? Why does he want to limit Cook county, which pays the majority of the state's revenue?

JOSEPH A. NEWMAN.

HYPOCRISY.

Madison, Wis., April 18.—What a gem of consistency is your plea of confusion and avoidance entitled "Hypocrisy" in today's TRIBUNE. If it is wrong to violate the federal constitution in Mississippi by denying the Negro the right to vote, does that make it right to nullify the provisions of the same constitution in Illinois and Wisconsin?

C. M. JANKY.

WHAT IS NULLIFICATION?

Villa Park, Ill., April 15.—The President of our country, the governor of our state, the Wickersham commission, the Supreme court of the United States have all declared themselves against nullification and for law enforcement.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE hasn't.

HOT DIGGITY DOG! RUSSIA STEPS ON SATURDAY NIGHT

Party Begins at Midnight; Even Have Orchestra.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MOSCOW, April 4.—[By Mail.]—Once a week society steps out. On Saturday night there is a supper dance in the grand ballroom of the Grand hotel, which begins at midnight and lasts until 5 a. m.

Visiting firemen, American and German engineers and specialists are the chief customers, and their partners are recruited from the old régime society ladies, plus such translaters as make a presentable appearance and have the necessary scenery.

For you must dress—that is, the fair sex must. There were only a few men in dinner coats, not one in tails, and those in tuxedos were all from the diplomatic set. The girls reminded one of a scene in a revue showing costumes of the past in a defile, so dear to the Paris stage.

Why Party Begins at 12.

I was told that the party begins at 12 o'clock at night only because most of the women fear to leave their homes, their rooms in congested flats, before midnight. At that time all their neighbors are asleep and won't see them in their finery. They tuck up their trains and long skirts so they won't show beneath their long coats, pull high snow boots over their slippers and silk stockings, throw a scarf over their elaborate coiffures, and steal silently downtown to meet their escorts at the hotel.

All vintages of female raiment are displayed. There is the pre-revolutionary era, with sedate, ankle length skirts trimmed with gewgaws and whatnots, affected by the older element. Then there is the audaciously short skirted element of four or five years ago, their scanty dresses reaching scarcely to the knee, then the transitory period is shown by net over skirts dropping over the skimpy ones, and finally the up-to-date girl with the long dress reaching quite to the floor.

Even Wear Backless Gowns.

The smartest ones wear the most daring décolletés, and there are even samples of this season's latest backless gown, which gives all the waiters and home guards a big kick.

Some have the old sheath skirts and the chemise robe, others the slit skirt, revealing a lot of artificial silk clad leg. One even had an ancient model of a minuret gown, a style which had some vogue before the war.

No jewelry is worn. Most of them have none after all the vicissitudes they have experienced, but those that have are not so dumb as to parade their wealth and run the risk of having it seized, as technically the government confiscated all wealth after the revolution.

Instead they wear big amethysts and yellow topazes, some have opals or turquoises, or agate, or carnelians. Modernistic wooden bracelets and armlets are seen occasionally. One girl had a silver anklet. Most have wrist watches, plain silver or nickel ones, without brilliants or other decorations.

All Tables "Reserved."

The tables are all "reserved" and must be allocated by the gentlemanly maitre d'hotel, wearing a smoking jacket in honor of it being Saturday night. The waiters all have clean, white coats, and don't smoke in the dining room while serving.

A fierce orchestra grinds out some antediluvian music, with occasionally a modern piece to keep the people awake. It seems the authorities sort of frown on jazz as being capitalistic and immoral. This is the reason one must obtain a slip from the customs officers at the frontier for all phonograph records brought into the country, and then take the same number of discs out again. They don't check up to make sure they are the same ones.

Everybody starts out by ordering plenty to eat. Russian women are usually hungry at any hour of the day or night. On comes caviar, blinis, the pancakes served with them with hot butter and cream poured over it, then smoked salmon, cut too thick to be palatable to my taste, and weird combinations of salad having as a base a curious, contemptible, tasteless vegetable looking like cut up celery but tasting like damp cardboard.

Lean Heavy on Vodka.

Vodka comes along in little carafes with these dishes and the foreigners lean heavily on it. Most of the Russians seem to get by with one shot of vodka and the women usually don't touch it at all.

Then the wiener schnitzels, or cotelettes pojarsky, which is a chicken wing, pumped full of melted butter and fried in bread crumbs so when you stick your fork in it a yellow geyser erupts over the tablecloth and you and your neighbor if you are not careful. Or else schachlyk, bits of mutton and onions and horseradish, all cooked on a skewer.

Along comes the wine and that wine card is real bad news. Awful red wine from the Caucasus comes to $8 a bottle, horrible sweet white wine from somewhere nearby costs $9 and $11. If you lose your mind and order Russian champagne it will be $17.50 a bottle and tastes terrible.

Take Dancing Seriously.

Everybody takes the dancing seriously. All get up every time the music starts and go right through the encore to the end of the dance. They don't like to waste music by not dancing to it. There are some artful steppers, too. A few persist in shuffling Charleston steps, but the more conservative element frowns on that. The one-step and foxtrot are the standbys. Then the demon orchestra leader breaks out in a tango. They have original ideas about that, too, and now I know why the Spanish government does not have anything to do with the soviet government, and vice versa.

"That's a swell piece; it must be a new one," a girl said when they started to play "O What a Funny Melodee," and the band got an encore when it cracked out, "I'm Dancing With Tears in My Eyes."

Some of the gents began to get pretty playful around 4 o'clock and even the girls began to tell their real names.

He Meets a "Countess."

"You know I'm really a countess," one told me, "but don't you tell any one. My mother was a lady in waiting to the czarina, and my father was an officer in the imperial army and was killed during the war.

"My mother died a few years ago, and I have one room, the littlest one, in what was once our nice big eight room apartment. A lot of our furniture is still there in the other rooms, but various tenants have moved out most of the best pieces. I tried to get my secretaire from what used to be my room, but the house committee would not permit me to take it. I couldn't even get an eiderdown comforter from my mother's bed. That was snapped up by somebody who moved in about an hour after she died."

Gradually between 4 and 5 a. m. the crowd flickers out. The embassy people leave first, then the others gradually follow. Downstairs there is the wrangle to get hats, coats and overshoes from the hat check boy.

Democratic Chief Here

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the Democratic national committee, returning to New York after a swing through the western states, passed through Chicago yesterday with predictions that prohibition, unemployment, and the federal farm board would be dominant issues in next year's presidential campaign.

Mr. Shouse said that during his trip through California, Washington, and Oregon, he was surprised at the "disappointment evidenced against the Hoover administration" and declared that the "chagrin against the President in his home state was noticeable to a remarkable degree." He said reduction of the Hoover-Grundy tariff and public ownership of the country's natural resources would be other issues of the campaign.

"But I don't need color advertising"

WELL, maybe so. Sales may be healthy, yet even the most successful feel that there is business which they should have—and don't get.

Sometimes good dealers don't seem to favor a product and new users could be added faster.

In such times a new approach, the unexpected, will swing those dealers into line, will start consumers calling for the merchandise.

Maybe sampling will do it, or a special deal, or advertising with a wallop.

New, eye-stopping, action-compelling, Chicago Tribune two-color, run-of-paper pages supply the shock tactics often needed to blast out indifference. Color needs no brief. Its value as a sales aid has been audited and banked. Chicago Tribune pages give color its maximum effectiveness. Here is color backed up with the sales action of the newspaper page.

Only the Tribune gives you this special technique and salesability in Chicago. Only the Tribune can give your color advertising dynamic impact with more than 805,000 families on weekdays and over 1,070,000 on Sunday in this rich market.

HONDURAS REBEL FORCES ROUTED IN NEW BATTLES

[Copyright: 1931: By the Associated Press.]

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, April 21.—American women and children were moved today from La Lima, banana and sugar settlement in the Puerto Cortes zone, when a rebel attack against the town was threatened. They were taken to Tela, now considered safe from the rebels since it is under the protection of the United States navy.

A skirmish between the government troops and the rebels occurred four miles from Tela early today, but the rebels were reported repulsed and driven back into the mountains.

A large force of troops was sent by the government to attack the rebels around San Pedro Sula, where they were threatening.

Foil Attack on Corozito.

Many Americans were temporarily endangered early today when rebels threatened to attack the banana settlement at Corozito. Government troops arrived in time to prevent the attack, routing the rebels after a sharp, short battle. Two rebels were killed and several others wounded. The danger at Corozito is now said to have disappeared.

All danger of a rebel attack at Trujillo was also said to be at an end and the rebels were reported entirely cleaned out of that region.

Will Not Land Marines.

The American Legation announced it was not contemplated to land marines at present, since that is not considered necessary.

The Cortes zone is the only section now menaced by the rebels and Peter C. Geyer, American naval attaché, has been sent there to confer with rebel leaders in an effort to make them respect a neutral zone in San Pedro Sula, the leading city of that region. The legation has arranged with Honduran authorities for such a neutral zone.

There are several hundred Americans along the seaboard but it is not believed that they are in any real danger.

Sandino Bandits Near Towns.

BLUEFIELDS, Nicaragua, April 21.—(AP)—Gen. Augusto Sandino's bandits were reported skulking today in large groups in the jungles of the Wanks river at Saclin and San Pedro del Norte, with Nicaraguan National Guardsmen on the alert for renewed outbreaks.

For 24 hours the guard had received no reports of any encounter with the bandits, but the guardsmen and foreigners were packing their arms handy in case the outlaws should strike again.

Since ships have left with the last of the American women and children from the bandit zone, workmen were reported to have resumed the cutting of bananas for delivery to steamers. Bluefields and Puerto Cabezas were reported quiet today, with conditions normal.

No Lives Lost in Raid.

Definite news was brought in that no lives were lost in the bandit raid of April 15 on Cabo Gracias a Dios, but the little town was looted of all movable merchandise and the tropical radio station was wrecked.

Word also was received of the safety of the wife and children of Karl Bregenser, murdered Moravian missionary. They were reported safe at the Neptune mine under the protection of the native National Guard. Bregenser was killed by Pedro Blandon, the bandit leader of the Logtown massacre, who in turn was slain by Americans.

American and other foreign refugees were brought into Puerto Cabezas, all well and uninjured, today aboard the U. S. S. Asheville. The U. S. S. Rochester arrived at Puerto Cabezas from Bluefields with Rear Admiral Arthur Smith aboard.

INDICT FORMER LEGION OFFICER AS EMBEZZLER

Pontiac, Mich., April 21.—[Special.]—Willis M. Brewer, former national vice commander of the American Legion, was indicted today by the Oakland county grand jury for alleged theft of funds from the county and from the Legion's billet at Otter lake.

The grand jury returned two indictments against Brewer, who prior to a year ago was for eight years chairman of the Oakland county board of auditors. Each indictment contains two counts, one for the alleged theft of funds from the county and one for the alleged theft from the billet. Each indictment specifies $2,500 as the amount he embezzled. The first covers the county's gift to the billet in 1929 through its board of supervisors and the second covers the gift for 1930. He furnished $10,000 bonds.

Continue Investigation Further.

The $5,000 for the two years is but a part of appropriations made by the supervisors for the billet in the five year period, 1926 to 1930 inclusive. The grand jury is continuing its investigation of the disposition of the other funds, all of which were made on Brewer's recommendation.

Brewer was Michigan commander of the American Legion in 1927-'28 and was a national vice commander in 1929-'30. He was barred from membership in the veterans' organization through action of Cook Nelson post in Pontiac, in December, when it was discovered he never received an honorable discharge from the army. He had remained in a cantonment 22 days after being drafted, but was excused from military service because of physical disability.

Other Charges Pending.

Complaints that he padded county expense accounts, paid out thousands of dollars in commissions for the purchase of county supplies while he was virtual head of the county government and otherwise mismanaged county affairs are also still to be investigated by the grand jury.

Find Pot of Gold Dating Centuries Before Christ

MARIBOR, Jugo-Slavia, April 21.—(AP)—A pot of gold believed to have been brought to Jugo-Slavia by Hannibal in the second punic war campaign has been found near here. Workmen tearing down the building in which the Austrian Admiral Tegetthoff was born found the pot, which was of earthenware and contained several hundred gold pieces dating to the second century before Christ.

a little at a time

AND "EXCLUSIVE" DESCRIBES HILLS BROS' CONTROLLED-ROASTING PROCESS. NO OTHER METHOD ROASTS COFFEE SO UNIFORMLY. TRY HILLS BROS COFFEE, AND SEE HOW CONTROLLED ROASTING DEVELOPS A FLAVOR NO OTHER COFFEE HAS.

THIS PROCESS—Controlled Roasting—invented and patented by Hills Bros., is radically different from any other method of roasting coffee.

Here's the reason: Hills Bros. roast their rare blend by a continuous, exact process—a few pounds at a time. The common method is to roast in bulk at once. The difference in results is obvious—Hills Bros. are able to roast every berry to uniform perfection, while the bulk-method cannot prevent variation in the roast.

No matter when or where you buy Hills Bros. Coffee, it is always fresh because it is packed in vacuum. By this process, air, which destroys the flavor of coffee, is taken out and kept out of the can. Coffee packed in ordinary cans, even if air-tight, does not stay fresh.

Grocers everywhere sell Hills Bros. Coffee. Ask for it by name and look for the Arab—the trade-mark—on the can.

ITALY 'BAPTIZES' 320,000 BOYS AS DUCE'S SOLDIERS

Full Fledged Members of Fascist Party.

BY DAVID DARRAH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 21. — Italy today knocked off work, closed shop, got out its flags and soldiers to celebrate Fascist Labor day and the 2,684th anniversary of the founding of Rome, which date is marked in red on the Fascist calendar on the order of Premier Mussolini.

The particular significance of the day is the annual levy of Italian youth. According to announced figures, 320,000 boys, who have reached the age of 18 and have completed four years of more or less strenuous training along military lines, today were inducted into the Fascist party. At the same time Secretary Guirati announced that 90,000 old timers, for lack of zeal, shady activities, or other disqualifications, were kicked out of the party.

Flags Succeed Rifles.

The induction ceremonies for these youths were held in the public squares of all Italian towns today. In Rome they occurred in the Piazza Siena, where several thousand black shirted lads marched past Il Duce and became members of his body of armed supporters. This rite is ordinarily completed with a symbolic pantomime in which a young Fascist hands a rifle to an advance guard, who in turn passes it along to a Balilila boy, the weapon thus passing down through three grades of candidates.

This year, however, in order to put a soft pedal on the military note, the colors of the city of Rome, instead of a rifle, were used.

All morning long files of "Black Shirts" of the regular army and navy, members of boys' and girls' Fascist organizations and university students paraded through the streets accompanied by blaring bands.

Award $40,000 in Prizes.

POLICE AND FIREMEN RECEIVE PAY CHECKS AFTER 4 DAY DELAY

Chicago's 8,000 policemen and firemen as well as employés of the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium and public library received their semi-monthly pay checks yesterday following the receipt of tax warrants aggregating $1,130,000 by air mail from Mayor Cermak at Miami Beach, Fla. The warrants were sent to him for his signature Friday.

City Treasurer Kearns cashed the warrants from the city's special funds immediately after they were deposited and the pay checks, already prepared, were sent out by Acting City Controller Petterson. The checks were due four days ago.

"We are now caught up on all the city pay rolls but so far as I can see we have reached the limit on buying tax wararnts out of the special funds," said Petterson. "We must sell them outside to meet the pay rolls on May 1 and thereafter."

Similar statements came from officials of the school board and county which, like the city, are facing a revenue famine due to the refusal of the banks to buy the 1931 tax warrants, pending the passage of legislation at Springfield revising the tax assessing machinery.

ORDERS POLICE WAR ON LOCKED DRINK PARLORS

Soft drink parlors and speakeasies operating behind closed doors and without licenses were the subject of a special order sent to all commanding police officers last night by Acting Police Commissioner Alcock.

"Information has reached this office that some soft drink parlors are operating behind locked doors," the order said. "A licensed soft drink parlor is a public place and must be operated as such and not with closed doors. Information has also been received that there are other speakeasies running behind closed doors and without a license. This is in violation of the law and must be stopped at once.

"Whenever I find either of these places operating in the future behind locked doors I will immediately suspend the captain in whose district the violation occurs."

The Alcock order is a part of a general drive against unlicensed places of business and against automobile owners without license tags. The campaign was ordered by Mayor Cermak as a means of increasing the city's miscellaneous revenues.

STATE HUNTS BAIL JUMPERS AND $3,500,000

Chief Justice John P. McGoorty of the Criminal court and Assistant State's Attorney A. C. DeWitt yesterday asked Acting Commissioner Alcock to assign a detective squad to do nothing else but hunt for approximately 1,000 fugitives from justice, who in the last twenty years have forfeited Criminal court bonds. Prosecutor DeWitt has compiled a complete list of names, which will be given to the police.

The bonds involve approximately $3,500,000, the prosecutor said. Not only will the squad be asked to look for fugitives, but also to investigate the bondsmen to determine if they have any property on which the state can levy.

"These cases are scattered through the Criminal court records and something should be done about them," said Prosecutor DeWitt. "If the bondsmen still have means the state should move to collect, no matter how old the cases are."

Chief Justice McGoorty said that if only a small percentage of the outstanding forfeitures are collected the county would receive a sizable sum.

THESE DOCTORS ENDORSE PLUTO WATER

IF twenty-one doctors all prescribed one remedy for you, wouldn't you prize their unanimous advice and follow it?

Well—here are twenty-one doctors who give you a single verdict. And these doctors are but a handful of the thousands all over America who prescribe Pluto Water!

The originals of these endorsements and photographs are in our files at French Lick Springs. However, out of respect to long-standing custom in the medical profession—and because medical societies prefer that doctor-members refrain from lending their names to printed advertisements—we have, in fairness to these doctors, omitted their names and made their photographs unrecognizable.

For fifty years, doctors have connnuously prescribed Pluto. What other laxative can show such a remarkable record? There is a reason, and a most excellent one, why Pluto stands in such high favor.

Doctors know the unequalled benefits of a saline laxative. And Pluto is the perfect saline. It brings you all the health-giving properties of the world-famous saline mineral springs at French Lick, Indiana.

Pluto—America's saline mineral water—acts by flushing the system. It cleanses in nature's way—water-washes the intestinal tract. That's why it brings such speedy, certain and complete relief—within 30 minutes to two hours. That, too, is why it is so gentle and harmless, and never gripes.

Two sizes—20c and 45c, at drug stores and fountains everywhere.

AMERICA'S LAXATIVE MINERAL WATER

Doctor Z., Pa., says: "Pluto Water acts quickly yet gently and certainly in flushing waste from the system."

Doctor J., Mich., says: "The worth of Pluto Water as an effective laxative has been proven to me in the 35 years I prescribed it."

Doctor J., Md., says: "I prescribe Pluto Water for cases where non-irritating action of a saline mineral water laxative is indicated."

Sales!

BY THE MILE

A MANUFACTURER has to make a sudden change. Maybe it's a change in the model of his product. Maybe it's a price revision.

But—

But how?

Only the newspaper could answer so immediate and definite need to sell. Thousands and thousands of merchants rely on the newspaper for just such quick day-after-day sales action.

This manufacturer will take a cue from those merchants who clear their shelves daily through the big city newspaper. He will build a permanent reputation with dealer and consumer for good service—quality merchandise—honest prices.

Advertise in The Globe-Democrat, and you adequately reach this rich market called The 49th State.

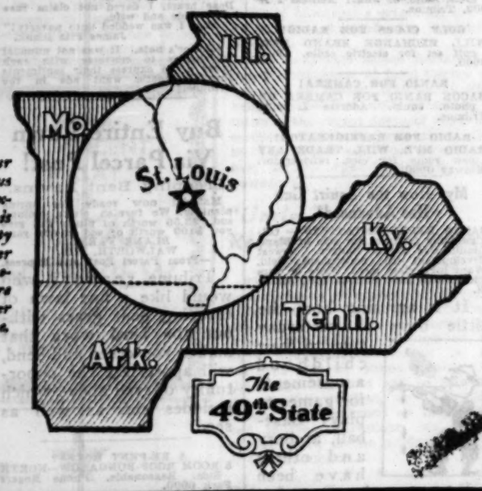
Moves it, not only across St. Louis counters, but across the counters of the entire 49th State.... Moberly, Centralia, Columbia, Cape Girardeau, these, and scores of other towns in The 49th State all are dominated by and respond to the sales influence of The Globe-Democrat.

Advertise in The Globe-Democrat alone, and you adequately reach this rich market called The 49th State.

This year, as never before, put the great newspapers to work for you.



Add this new State to your map. It's a circle . . . radius 150 miles. Its population exceeds 5 millions. Its wealth is based upon a wider variety of resources than any other State can show. The Globe-Democrat serves this entire market. No other newspaper can claim such coverage.

URGE 21 SAFETY RULES AT TUNNEL DISASTER QUIZ

Coroner's Jury Finds Gas Killed 11 Victims.

A list of twenty-one recommendations designed to avert tunnel disasters was adopted by a coroner's jury which yesterday closed an inquest into the deaths of eleven men who died in the sanitary district tunnel at 22d and Laflin streets last week.

Immediately after the inquest Edward J. Kelly, chief engineer of the sanitary district, and Commissioner of Public Works A. A. Sprague declared that the recommendations would be kept in mind in all tunnel construction work.

The jury found that the four firemen and seven laborers came to their deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning which was the result of fumes from a fire of undetermined origin. The jury also commended the "unusual courage" displayed at the tunnel by the firemen and others who participated in the rescue of more than twenty persons.

Marshal Pierce Testifies.

The inquest was held in the courtroom of Chief Justice Sonsteby of the Municipal court. It was featured by the testimony of Division Marshal Patrick J. Pierce who, with fifteen others, remained in the tunnel for thirteen hours, taking refuge in an air chamber. Marshal Pierce was the last to leave the tunnel alive.

Albert Martino, a laborer, testified that he heard an explosion in the tunnel about 6:30 in the evening. He said he found a light flame, like that of illuminating gas, burning in one place. He tried vainly to extinguish it and then notified other laborers and officials, who called the fire department.

Marshal Pierce told of his first descent into the tunnel with a number of firemen. At first the air was fairly clear, he said, but the men began to grow dizzy as the fumes grew thicker. The laborers in the tunnel stampeded instead of making an orderly exit, he said, and it was this disorder which caused the deaths of several. Testimony showed that John Letwin, laborer, received a fractured jaw, three broken ribs, and internal injuries in the rush and these injuries, combined with the carbon monoxide fumes, caused his death.

Urge Fireproof Materials.

In their verdict the jurors recommended that all tunnels be lined with fireproof materials, that a telephone system be installed in every tunnel, that a proper ventilation system be installed, that electric lights should be the only illumination permitted, that gas masks be placed in every tunnel, and that emergency exits be constructed.

The jury also recommended that a number of members of the fire department be instructed in mine rescue work.

The jurors were Elmer T. Stevens, foreman; John T. Pirie, John A. Garcia, James Verselius, John S. Dean, and Dr. Fred O. Tonney.

ASKS DIVORCE

HELEN LEE WORTHING. (Mrs. E. C. Nelson.)
[Associated Press Photo.]

Ex-Chorus Girl Says He Called Her Crazy.

Los Angeles, Cal., April 21.—(AP)—Helen Lee Worthington, once a Broadway chorus girl, filed suit for divorce today against her Negro husband, Dr. Eugene C. Nelson.

Their romance originated after Miss Worthington came west to try to enter the films. She eloped with the Negro physician to Tijuana, Mexico, and was married June 28, 1927.

Charges He Accused Her.

In her divorce complaint she stated she left Dr. Nelson April 14 after a series of temporary estrangements. The former dancer alleged Dr. Nelson nagged her continually, said she was insane, accused her of associating with other men, and on at least one occasion struck her.

On the day they separated, she said, Dr. Nelson pushed her down the hallway of their home and told her he would "get rid of her by placing her in a sanitarium." Miss Worthington also accused her husband of associating with other women.

Treated for Nervous Ailment.

Dr. Nelson said the filing of the suit was no surprise to him. He mentioned repeated estrangements in the last eighteen months, during which Miss Worthington took treatments in hospitals in Los Angeles, New York, and Madison, Wis., for a nervous ailment. He said he had financed her treatment and had done everything possible to bring about a reconciliation.

"If she wants a divorce," Dr. Nelson said, "I shall make no contest other than to make a defense if any unwarranted charges are made against me."

Palmer Shorthand System Inventor Dies in Colorado

Denver, Colo., April 21.—(AP)—Robert Lence, 38, inventor of the Palmer alphabetic shorthand system, died at his home in Aurora, Colo., yesterday. He came to Colorado from Wichita, Kas., five years ago. While at the Fort Lyon, Colo., government hospital for treatment for tuberculosis contracted during the world war, Lence completed the shorthand system with the help of Miss Marian Palmer, who later became his wife.

MOORS AND RIFFS LOOM AS MENACE TO SPANISH RULE

Tangier Quiet; Tribesmen Found Restless.

BY H. H. WALL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

GIBRALTAR, April 21.—THE TRIBUNE correspondent today toured Tangier and interviewed American, British and Italian consuls, all stated that complete tranquility is prevailing throughout Morocco. Nothing abnormal has happened beyond Spanish Republican demonstrations following the fall of King Alfonso.

Republican flags have been hoisted above all Spanish buildings, the legation, post office, cable office and clubs. Spaniards are wearing Republican colors in their buttonholes. There has been no interference with the legations or commercial concerns by Republicans.

Finds Unrest Among Riffs.

It is emphasized that the British consul never cabled that he required protection for British interests, nor did any other consulate ministers. Spanish troops assert that revolutionary unrest and feeling against Spain is observed among the Riffians and Moors generally in the Tangier district. The tribes are under the impression that Spanish troops, now in Morocco, will be recalled to Spain, thus affording an opportunity for the Riffians to gain the upper hand in north Africa.

This has given authorities grounds for suspicion, and precautionary steps have been taken for immediate action if necessary.

"The Moors do not fear the Spanish Republican army, which has not performed its duty to the king whom it was sworn to protect. A nation that is kingless is powerless."

The utmost respect is shown for Spaniards in Tangier, the diplomatic capital of the international supplement, when the Marseillaise is played at bull fights, concerts and other functions. Military men stand at salute while the civilians take off their hats and cheer for the republic.

Name Streets After Republicans.

All the streets in Ceuta, Tetuan and Melilla, bearing royalist names, have been substituted by names of Republican leaders of the revolution. One street is named after Capt. Fermyn Galen, who was executed at Jaca after the December revolt.

Contest Over Will of Rich Auto Man Opens in England

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 21.—The contest over the $6,215,000 estate of D. Napier, the famous motor car manufacturer, who left the bulk of his wealth to Mrs. Norah Fryer, widow of a former physician with whom Mrs. Napier alleges her estranged husband lived, was opened in Probate court today. The contest is based on charges of coercion "due to the extended illness and hallucination" of the millionaire that he was unable to live without the constant attention of Mrs. Fryer. Napier left his wife nothing and cut off all his children, with one exception.

Dear heart, I dared not claim thee bride and wife.
For I was wedded unto poverty!"

Lists of Famous Places and Bars Excite Interest

A few days ago we were thumbing through several copies of the Chicago Tribune's Paris (France) edition. We discovered that want ads were likely to appear most anywhere, even though the paper carried a typical want ad section. Many of the classifications we are accustomed to see in our own want ad section appear in what is called the "Continental Directory."

"Continental Directory"

The continental directory lists hotels, restaurants, and pensions, as well as shops, personal service, and stores. Reading this directory is much like reading a guide to famed continental resorts: Aix-les-Bains, Biarritz, Carcassone, Chatel-Guyon, Pau, Vichy, Cannes, Monte Carlo, and Nice—all and more, too, advertise here. As in our own want ad section, there are also listed the services of specialists, investigators, tearooms, tailors and dressmakers, shirt makers, jewelers, potters, public stenographers, etc.

Read 'Em and Weep!

Here are reprinted some of the want ads appearing in the Tribune Paris edition. Some of them may make you want to spend your vacation in gay Paree!

Donham Plan Urged as Way to Meet Soviets

Harvard Dean Advocates Business Foresight.

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

THREE weeks ago a book called "Business Adrift," by Wallace Brett Donham [Whittlesey House] reached the groaning shelves of the book department. We cast an interested eye upon it, saw that it was one of those books about business and unemployment and the influence of the soviet on modern economics, war debts, and all of the other things about which we feel terribly at sea.

So we decided that somebody who knew a lot about those things should review it. And we began casting about for the ideal reviewer.

And then, suddenly out of a clear sky, "Business Adrift," like John Maynard Keynes' "Economic Consequences of the Peace," some years ago, began to be on everybody's lips. Not everybody's, in three weeks' time, but everybody's, in three weeks' time, really, but one heard of "The Donham Plan" here, there, and everywhere. So we decided that we'd just dig into the book ourselves and see what our feeble knowledge of economics would whittle out of it. At least, we thought, we can tell our readers the news about it, how it happened to be, and why it has caused such a sensation.

The author of the book, Wallace Brett Donham, is dean of the Graduate School of Business administration at Harvard university.

He made, a short time ago, a speech before the annual meeting of the Harvard Associates, an organization of approximately 250 leaders of industry who are supporters of that particular school.

In that speech he pointed out that the success of the Russian experiment probably was assured for a certain number of years to come and that Russia economically rehabilitated and intelligently functioning could constitute a more far reaching threat against the economic security of western Europe and the United States than was generally realized.

Capitalism could not fight communism politically, he said. If capitalism is to be preserved it must offer something better than communism. The basic success of communism lies in the fact that it has a plan. American business, too, must have a plan if it is to have strength to fight.

The speech created a sensation in business. It was printed for private circulation among the Associates. Soon floated out from Washington that Donham had been invited—summoned—to the White House to discuss his plan with President Hoover. Administration circles were excited about it, as the story ran. The complete speech has been published by Harvard House, a branch of the Alder-Hill company, and it is given over to the American business man and woman as it was given to those 250 executives.

If a business man or woman—no matter at all—can leave this book without having considered for a while the problems which the future holds and without having used his or her intelligence in that consideration. And it is more important to stimulate constructive thought about its ailments than to give the world a pill to swallow that will presumably make it well.

It seems to me "Business Adrift" says this: American business must have a plan. We cannot foresee the terrible elements that lie in the future, beyond a certain time. But we can profitably almost every major factor in our development for one business generation—that is, about 20 years.

H. G. WELLS DECRIES EUROPEAN HABIT OF LIVING IN OLD HOMES

LONDON, April 21.—(AP)—H. G. Wells believes the world needs a new house. Speaking before the Royal Institute of British Architects he said today:

"We must accept the possibilities of rebousing all mankind, rebuilding every city in the world, and reclaiming roads and countryside. I think we can well look forward to the time when towns will rebuild themselves as we now go to the tailor for a new suit of clothes."

Mr. Donham says the so-called leaders of business have not succeeded in making capitalism secure. It now becomes the duty of every man to concentrate on the future, to assume his personal responsibility for developing an intelligent economic system.

The theory that our future prosperity is based on the active exploitation of foreign trade he attacks on the basis that there is such a close association between western Europe and the United States that a violent commercial warfare between us would weaken us both.

"Suppose, then, fifteen or twenty years from now," he says, "the soviet autocracy, largely through carrying out ideas developed by individualistic societies, suddenly is able to raise substantially the standards of the Russian people, and suppose in the meantime we have succeeded in defeating England and Germany in a bitter struggle in the open markets of the world and consequently in depressing their standards of living. Will they not become communistic? Can we hold our capitalistic organization with all Europe bolshevist? It is clear that our greatest stake in this middle period (the next twenty years) requires the success of England and Germany, and that this is jeopardized by our aggressive expansion of foreign trade."

The war debts should be canceled, he says, not from any sentimental reasons or because any one thinks that we have a moral obligation to do so, but as a pure economic measure, for the quicker western Europe is put on its feet the sooner we ourselves will be economically stable.

Our prosperity of the last decade, he says, was entirely false. It was only an illusion of prosperity, due to technological experiments. We have, he believes, almost reached the saturation point in the absorption of our benefits. What we must have is a plan which will insure the maintenance of wages at a high level, provide for the security of employment—he does not mean employment insurance, but, he says, "the cure for unemployment is work"—and increase leisure for every one to enjoy the benefits we have developed.

[Copyright: 1931: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 21.— [Special.] — Two picturesque society weddings took place here today, while the marriage of a peer's daughter was celebrated quietly owing to family mourning.

Crowds gathered outside St. Margaret's at Westminster, where Lord Brougham and Vaux, 21 year old peer, and Valerie French were married.

Almost simultaneously was the wedding at St. Martin's in the Fields of Lady Mary Graham, elder daughter of the Duke and Duchess Montrose, and John Boscawen, of a well known Hampshire family.

All tenants of Lord Brougham's estate at Penrith, Cumberland, saw his wedding today, the young peer having brought them to London two days ago; they occupied special seats in the church. Many tenants of the duke of Montrose's estate on the Isle of Arran attended his daughter's wedding.

The Honorable Eileen Beresford, 19 year old daughter of Lord Decies, was married to Robert O'Brien in Grosvenor chapel in a quiet ceremony because of the recent death of the bride's mother. The bride was given away by her father and was attended by her sister, the Honorable Moya Beresford.

British Doctor Tells of Law Insuring Health of Workers

Compulsory national health insurance, covering general health and dental service for some 150,000 persons in England and Wales, was described last night by Dr. George F. McCleary. He is deputy senior medical officer of the British health ministry. He spoke at a meeting o fthe Chicago Dental society in the Medical and Dental Arts building, emphasizing the fact that there was no connection between that insurance and the unemployment insurance or dole.

DR. C. L. BAKER. [Eugene L. Ray Photo.]

"The British system of national health insurance was established in 1911," Dr. McCleary said, "and is described as 'an act to provide for insurance against loss of health and the prevention and cure of sickness.' It is compulsory upon all persons over the age of 16 who are employed at manual labor and embraces practically all wage earners.

"The cost of the insurance is borne partly by the insured, partly by the employer, and partly by the state, with the employer responsible for his and the employes' collections. Both medical and dental attention is given by physicians and dentists of the insuree's choice. Unless he has been removed from the medical list by the minister every physician is qualified to become an insurance practitioner.

"Benefits to the insured include medical treatment and medicines, sickness benefits over fixed periods, disablement benefits, maternity benefits and special benefits passed on by a society group."

During the meeting the annual election of officers was held. Officers elected were: President, Charles R. Baker; vice president, Ashley M. Hewitt; secretary, reelected, Howard C. Miller; treasurer, Stanley D. Tylman; chairman of the board of censors, reelected, Paul H. Hoffel; members of the board of censors, B. D. Friedman and J. J. Moran.

Mrs. Eleanor Patterson Buys Dower House, Once Lord Baltimore's

Weshington, D. C., April 21.—[Special.]—Dower house, one of the historic mansions in Maryland, has been sold to Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, editor of the Washington Herald, it was learned at Mrs. Patterson's office this afternoon. The house, once one of the estates of Lord Baltimore, was damaged by fire some time ago, but will now be restored.

The sale was made to Mrs. Patterson by the Dower House corporation, but the consideration was not made public. It is understood that Mrs. Patterson will take possession of the property at once.

The old mansion has in recent years been used as a dining place under the management of Mrs. Matilda Duvall, a director in the Dower House corporation. Often during the winter months parties from Baltimore or Washington motored down to elaborate dinners set in an atmosphere of colonial days.

Mrs. Patterson is the granddaughter of Joseph Medill, founder of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels Here on Their Way East

Gloria Swanson and Bebe Daniels, motion picture stars, arrived in Chicago five hours late on the Santa Fé Chief yesterday and before leaving for New York on the Commodore of the New York Central found time to talk about their new pictures, and a new old boy friend and husband respectively, and dyed hair, and clothes.

Gloria was just telling about her new picture, "Indiscreet," which first was named "Obey That Impulse." Then some one asked her about a lieutenant-colonel from Fort Leavenworth who'd met her at the train in Kansas City with three dozen roses. He's a Lieut. Col. James Ulio.

"O," she said, "he's a very old friend and I like old friends."

Contests Are Lively, All Disclaiming Politics.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—[Special.]—Everybody, from president to page, at this 40th congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution today protested innocence of practical politics within the organization and predicted that Thursday's election will be a delightful and tranquil affair.

Mrs. Alfred J. Brousseau, a past president who weathered a few storms in her own reign, went so far as to declare that this year's candidates were so sweet and friendly they were "just too cute for words."

Mrs. Lowell Fletcher Hobart, the president, announcing the number of candidates, said: "They are all still—O, what is the term?—I guess it's 'in the ring.'" Then she pointed the moral by adding: "You can see how little I know about politics."

Nevertheless, there are nine women running for seven offices, all vice presidencies. And beneath the assertion of peace runs an undercurrent of excitement and sometimes of mystery. For instance, early today Mrs. Hobart announced that there was a rumor that one of the vice presidential candidates had withdrawn, that this wasn't true, and that it had started in the press room. Nobody in the press room had heard of it. Finally it was revealed that Mrs. W. H. Vaught of West Virginia was the candidate to whom the rumor referred. And Mrs. Vaught is very much a candidate. A tenth candidate, Mrs. Watt Thomas Brown of Alabama, did withdraw because she wished to devote her time to a social settlement school run by the D. A. R.

The candidacy of Mrs. Charles Herrick of Chicago was boomed tonight at the Illinois dinner. She is widely known to the national organization because of her work as national chairman of the patriotic education committee, on which she will report tomorrow. Her election Thursday is said to be assured.

"They're great. Too bad they couldn't stay longer," was the comment of those privileged to greet the royal party.

During the hour and a quarter that the king's special train was in the Root street yards of the La Salle street station their majesties' social activities were restricted by the illness of this absolute ruler of some 11,500,000 souls.

Under instructions from the physicians accompanying the entourage, the royal couple made only a brief appearance on the rear platform for cameramen. Then the king and queen received Nathan William MacChesney, Siamese consul in Chicago and Mrs. MacChesney. Reporters and workers in the railroad yards were about the only ones who gathered around the train, the plans for a formal reception having been canceled previously.

King Prajadhipok, who is suffering from malaria, bronchitis, and eye trouble for which he will undergo an operation at Ophir hall, the estate of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid near Scarborough, hardly saw more of Chicago than Chicago saw of him. But drawing on his memories of a former visit here, he issued a few informal and complimentary comments on the city through his spokesman and father-in-law, Prince Svasti, supplementing the formal message handed out by the same deputy at the same time.

"None could be left unmoved by the cordiality of the greetings accorded us since our arrival," the printed statement read. "In reaching Chicago, the queen and I have something of the feeling of returning to a familiar scene, for we recall with pleasure a brief visit we made to this city seven years ago. Here and elsewhere evidence of growth are striking. My recollections of this trip will center not so much upon material progress, however, as on the generous hospitality we have everywhere met."

The king of Siam is a patron of Presbyterian missionary work. This fact, together with the statement that Prince Damrong "continues his kindly interest" in the work, was revealed in the annual report of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, released yesterday.

The report states that Prince Nagor Svarga officiated at the dedication of the McCormick hospital at Chiengmai, while Princess Songkla donated $2,000 for X-ray equipment for that hospital.

THE STAGE

THE third play in the Theater Guild's spring season at the Illinois theater may be the comedy called "He," from the French of Alfred Savoir, which will be staged in Philadelphia next Monday night. Announcements to the effect that the Guild's revival of Bernard Shaw's "Getting Married" would round out the Chicago program have been merely assumptions. The management of the Illinois theater has an idea that contracts for three weeks of "He" will be signed, sealed and delivered within the next few days.

The theatrical productions which ended their Broadway careers last Saturday night were "Joy of Living," "Dracula," and "Dr. X." With Donald Brian and Taylor Holmes as costars, the "Joy of Living" company has started off on a tour, with Philadelphia as its first stop.

George E. Wintz, who is helping to make Chicago a "producing center," says that he is well satisfied with box office conditions at the Playhouse, where his "Apron Strings" is in performance, and that therefore he has abandoned his plans for another production this season. He believes that "Apron Strings" will prolong its stay on Michigan avenue into the summer doldrums.

The New York première of "Two's Company"—a two character drama—was indefinitely postponed last Monday a few hours before curtain time. Disappointed first nighters were informed that insufficient rehearsals and the indisposition of Ann Davis were the causes of this frustration. Rollo Peters was the other half of the company.

The Chicago Drama league announces that its fifth annual "little theater" tournament will be held at the Goodman during the week of May 1. Eighteen amateur groups have entered the competition. The "finals" will take place May 10.

Billy Taylor, the young comedian who made a hit in Fred Stone's "Ripples" at the Illinois last Yuletide, to the character of the "mamma's boy" state trooper, has been discovered on this week's vaudeville program at the Palace theater. He is serving as master of ceremonies for Gus Edwards' "New Stars on Parade." . . . Harry Mervis, of the Goodman repertory company, will lecture upon the folklore of vampires and werewolves at the Cinema Art theater this weekend as an auxiliary to the showing of the "Dracula" film. . . . The much-married Peggy Joyce figures on this week's vaudeville program at the Palace theater, New York. Gene Sarazen and Johnny Farrell of golf fame are among her competitors.

Sun Vagaries Called Clews to the Weather

Longer Forecast Periods Now Successful.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—First attempts to forecast weather several months ahead by predicting variations in the sun's radiation apparently have succeeded. The results were made public today by Dr. Charles G. Abbott, astronomer, secretary of the Smithsonian institution.

DR. C. G. ABBOTT. [Harris & Ewing Photo.]

He has predicted variations in the sun's radation for 1931 and 1932, which so far have followed his forecasts slowly. H. H. Clayton, another scientist, has used the same method to forecast actual weather conditions with considerable success.

Abbot and Clayton long have believed that variations in the radiation, or energy, that the sun sends to the earth are the causes of major changes in the weather.

Last December Dr. Abbot predicted how the sun's radiation would vary during the next two years. His predictions have been carefully checked by observation of the actual variations. So far in 1931, Dr. Abbot says, the radiation has varied very nearly as he predicted.

In February Clayton predicted cool weather and much rainfall for the drought area during the latter two weeks in March and the first week in April, basing his prediction on expected changes in the sun's radiation. The cool weather and rain occurred as predicted, Dr. Abbot says.

Variations in the sun's radiation can be predicted because they seem to occur in five regular cycles of 68, 45, 25, 11, and 3 months. There also are shorter cycles not as regular, and there may be longer cycles, not yet discovered, perhaps lasting hundreds of years, Dr. Abbot believes. He says the drought of 1930 may have been the result of a solar radiation cycle or combination of several long cycles coming together only perhaps about once in a century. By noting how the cycles have moved in the past their movements can be predicted by observers of the future, he hopes, just as movements of planets are predicted.

Dr. Abbot is of the opinion that changes in the sun's radiation rule the weather by their effect on the movement of areas of high and low atmospheric pressure. Movement of these areas across country is known to be the immediate cause of weather conditions.

An increase or decrease in the sun's radiation may affect the weather differently in different places. Increased radiation may cause a rise in temperature, atmospheric pressure, or rainfall at one point, but a drop elsewhere.

Dr. Abbot says several more generations of observing solar variations will be necessary before such rare events as last year's drought can be predicted, but he hopes useful weather forecasts extending weeks, months, and perhaps years in advance, may soon be possible. With this end in view, extensive statistics are being computed to learn the influence of the sun on weather in individual regions of the earth.

Greek Story Sung in Latin to Russ Tunes

BY EDWARD MOORE.

RADIO listeners had a chance to hear part of Stravinsky's new work, "OEdipus Rex," from New York last night. It is opera or oratorio, depending on how you take it, the present performance, conducted by Leopold Stokowski, played by the Philadelphia orchestra, sung by Margaret Matzenauer and Paul Althouse among the soloists and the Harvard Glee club for a chorus, having been apparently a combination of oratorio and gigantic marionette show.

At least we were told that the singers were on one stage level, some huge artificial figures on another, and the voice of the narrator proceeding from a loud speaker on the top of all. This had to be imagined here. What was not imaginary was that out of the limited time left for a broadcast five minutes were taken by another orchestra and fifteen more by an announcer who told all about the work as drama, as music, and as performance before it began.

It was another of the contemporary works needing more than one hearing. From what could be heard, Stravinsky has handled his choruses with great skill. He has moved on to a rather simpler idiom than he used to employ, and his choral writing was impressive as music and striking as drama. Not enough could be heard of the solos to tell whether they were equally good. What little could be heard seemed to indicate that they were not. For one thing the work, by Stravinsky's command, was sung in Latin, while the narrator spoke English. This, to the untutored, gave a slight aroma of bunk to what was otherwise a rather distinguished work. At any rate, it deserves to be heard again.

The Marshall Field & Co. Choral society, Edgar Nelson conductor, sang a series of part songs entirely pleasantly last night at Orchestra hall, and applauded vigorously while the assisting artist, John Charles Thomas, baritone of the Civic Opera and other companies, did some superb solos. His fine voice, his musicianship, and his unfailing sense of the stage made him an uncommon success. He was fully at home in songs from the ancient Italian, he was an expert in the art of singing lieder, and he projected a semi-comic song from the French with as much certainty as he had been doing just before in serious work.

Mary Niemann, a well developed pianist with something to say in her music, appeared in joint recital at Kimball hall last night with Ruth Heizer, contralto, who took the place of Earl Alexander, announced but incapacitated by illness. Miss Heizer, in a group by John Alden Carpenter, displayed a voice of quality and an accurate knowledge of how to apply her musical resources. Mrs. Niemann's firm and brilliant tone made her greatly liked in a seldom heard theme and variations by Camille Chevillard.

What's Sauce for the Goose Is Often Poison to the Gander

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"Recently, Miss Blake, you stated in a daily article that 'a wife should treat a husband's ex-flame lightly and treat her [or the situation of her reappearance] good naturedly.' I wonder if you ever stopped to think what a husband would do if his wife's former sweetheart traveled in the same social set and showed a lingering fondness for her? Would that husband take the matter lightly? I should say not.

"Then, tell me, why should a wife do so? Any man, as you know, would 'rare up' like a lion, censure his wife severely and accuse her of things she never thought of doing if he found her enjoying the old friend's company, even for a minute. My opinion is that if a husband's ex-flame should be treated as you suggest, then the wife's ex-flame should be extended the same good natured courtesy.

"FLORENCE MCC."

"Florence, Florence," be your age and don't try to tell me that you expect men to subscribe to the same behavior as a woman under any such circumstances. Of course, they should. Husbands should treat the former rival with all the grace that a clever woman could practice, were the situation reversed. But what men should do, according to the woman code, and what they do do, according to their own code, is something else again. And I dunno know that the average woman would have them any different.

Am I right or am I wrong in suspecting our esteemed sex of rather enjoying the spectacle of a jealous mate? I may be wrong—but I've known a lot of women in my time who'd think they'd lost their charms if hubby didn't rise up indignantly, protectively and assertively when it looked as if his wife found favor in another man's eyes. Maybe you're one of the rare ones, Florence, just as there are rare examples in the other sex, who can look upon these old flame [or new] meetings with the calm poise that would be their most becoming manner.

Aside from that, though, there's just no use in arguing outside feminist copybook circles that a man should do so and so because a woman is expected to do so and so. The women who get on most successfully with men just don't try to apply their own code to male behavior response.

There is always that possibility, E. A. J. So guard against it by letting more time elapse between dates.

Stop the Invitations.

"Dear Miss Blake: A girl acted as though she cared for me. I asked her out a few times, but she refused, giving no reason. She goes out with other fellows. WONDERING."

It indicates she is not favorable to your invitations, so extend no more.

THE CLICK OF THE GATE

By Alice Campbell

SYNOPSIS.

Iris de Bertincourt lives in a remote section of Paris with her 15 year old daughter, Clare, and Mal. Alan Charnwood are desperately in love, but there are barriers to their immediate marriage. They are spending the last evening they will have together for months, as Mal. Charnwood plans to leave next day for Africa. Clare is acting in a school play and is to be brought home by friends.

Iris has been separated for years from her husband, Marcel de Bertincourt, a man of enormous charm, but utterly lacking in moral sense.

INSTALLMENT III.

A VEXATIOUS GIFT.

Their excitement had been wasted on a delivery man bringing a parcel. Iris looked with amused relief at Iris as she came in again, holding a long cardboard box.

"Flowers," she announced, with a note of inquiry. "Did you——?"

"Not this time," he denied. "You have another admirer apparently."

She frowned a little as she loosened the wrappings and uncovered a dozen of long-stemmed red roses, dewy, perfect. On top lay an envelope, which she tore open only to click her tongue with annoyed surprise.

"You don't appear pleased."

For a second she did not answer. Then she held the card out at arm's length for him to see.

"Monsieur Marcel de Bertincourt! Your husband? But what the devil's the meaning of this?"

She cast the box from her on to the chaise longue, and returned to his side, face clouded with vexation.

"It's one of the inexplicable things about him," she declared slowly, putting two lumps of sugar into Charnwood's cup, "that in spite of everything he invariably sends me flowers—red roses—on our wedding anniversary. Every year, without fail. Mathilde takes them to the sisters across the street; these will go there tomorrow. But this time—really, it's going too far! There's no reason that I can see, for it's not any anniversary. Or no—let me think—what is today? October seventh . . . well, it almost is. Yes, tomorrow is the date of our formal fiancailles."

"Odd," commented Charnwood, discomfited. "You never told me he did that sort of thing." He could not possibly understand why a man who had flagrantly neglected his wife should persist in paying her sentimental tributes. "How do you explain such behavior?"

"I don't explain it. By now I suppose it's become a habit, purely mechanical."

"Do you think by any chance he still cherishes an affection for you?"

"Affection?" she gave a little scornful laugh. "He doesn't know what that means. Let's not talk of it."

"Very well, we won't. But there's one question I'd like to ask you, now we're on the subject." He put his hand under her chin, raising her head so that he could look straight into her eyes. "Are you absolutely sure you could never live with him again? Under any circumstances? I want to know before it's too late."

He was not entirely satisfied.

"I believe that, Iris. But why is it you seem more nervous about our future than you were in the beginning. What has happened to upset you?"

She sipped her coffee slowly, trying to put her thoughts into suitable words.

"It's just this, if you must know," she replied presently. "For a little while Baby Clare began to ask uncomfortable questions. She stopped, but I'm afraid she may begin again."

"What sort of questions?"

"About her father, why I couldn't live with him, if it wouldn't be better for us all if we made things up. I simply don't know how to answer her. She's too young to be told the truth."

"O, I see!" His face cleared. "Well, I shouldn't let that bother me. It's bad for her, of course, that she can't have both her parents, but in a case like this there is nothing to be done about it."

"Nothing," she cried, in complete agreement. "Besides, it's not as if I'd shown the faintest interest in her. Thank God he hasn't! It would have made things more difficult, for I've definitely wanted to keep her away from him."

"You think he might do her harm?"

"In subtle ways, yes. Marcel has such enormous charm," she went on thoughtfully. "It would be so easy for a young impressionable girl to fall under his spell. He could make her believe anything. O! I'm glad he never thought to see her!"

"I see. Then you need have no cause to look back."

He bent his head. Their lips met, clung together for long seconds. When they drew apart she was breathless, her cheeks on fire.

"What were we saying a little while ago?" she asked hurriedly, to restore her balance.

"You were about to tell me how you came to marry De Bertincourt. And I want to know about this aunt of yours, and why you are so frightened of him."

"Frightened? I'm not frightened." she declared stoutly. "I'm my own mistress, I can do as I like." She threw wide her arms with a gesture of freedom. "No, it's not that. But I dread scenes. She's old, childless—which counts much—and has a terribly dominating nature. I don't want to cross her more than is necessary, for I know what it would mean."

He lit a cigaret for her, and presently she continued, puffing thoughtfully and looking into the fire.

"She quarreled with her younger sister—my mother—for marrying an Englishman; but when we were left with only my father's pension to live on—he was killed in the Boer war—she offered us a home and in every way was generosity and kindness itself. That is what she likes—doing things for people, making them dependent on her; but she exacts a price. She must and will possess one entirely. Nothing else contents her."

"Were you fond of her?"

"One can't love Tante Victoire, it's impossible; but I am very grateful to her. When my mother died and there was no one to dispute her claim, she regarded me as her own property to do with as she saw fit. She lavished a sort of Spartan devotion on me, reared me in the most rigid French manner. I was a jeune fille pure and simple. Very pure and extremely simple."

"All this time I had lived in a moldy old château in Côte d'Or. I had never spoken to a man alone, seldom seen a young one. Then one day when I was seventeen I was driving with my aunt along a country road, and we met a young man on horseback, who bowed to us. A moment later Tante Victoire said to me, 'Marie'—for she never called me by my English name—'Marie, that gentleman who passed is your cousin, Marcel de Bertincourt, of whom we have often talked. In two months he will be your husband.'"

Charnwood's face was a study in outraged indignation.

"Like that? Good God! Do you mean you had no choice?"

"O, I could have rebelled, I suppose, but, frankly, I never thought of doing so. Everything else in life had been decided for me, why not marriage? Besides, I was tremendously enthralled by accounts of Marcel, whom Tante Victoire adored. He was young, brilliant, lived in Paris. I would live in Paris. You can't guess how that delighted me! Does a chrysalis want to emerge from its cocoon?"

"But surely you got to know him before you were married?"

"I saw him perhaps half a dozen times, never unchaperoned, except once or twice for ten minutes. Still I will tell you this: I was convinced that I worshiped him. He was my hero, my ideal, he could do no wrong. That's not strange. I had no one to compare him with, and was only too eager to wrap the garment of my romantic fancy around the first available object."

Presents and Purchases Aid Two Charities

BY THALIA ——.

MOST of the fashionable women in town yesterday wended their way to the Casino laden with gifts for the White Elephant. Then they went on to acquire new things at the Eli Bates sale at the Cyrus Hall McCormick house on Burton place.

Both the giving and the purchasing were done with charitable intent, and the Children's Memorial hospital and the Bates settlement should profit greatly by the day's business.

At the Casino there was a constant stream of guests, all bearing "white elephants," from 3 until after 6 o'clock. Two long tables in the ballroom were piled high with offerings that eventually will be on sale at the Rummage shop.

Among them were a dozen amber glasses sent by Mrs. Bryan S. Reid, a table and chairs from Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, a riding habit, a desk set and rug from Mrs. James Hutchins, two cut steel vases from Mrs. Hopewell Rogers, some jewelry from Mrs. Joseph E. Otis and Miss Emily Otis, a lovely antique mirror from Mrs. Jacob Baur, a tea table and tray from Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, four dresses from Miss Laura Sprague, some shoes and suits that Mrs. Billings McArthur's boys have outgrown, and countless other donations ranging from Victorian relics to modern novelties.

Among the committee members officiating at the tea were Mrs. Patrick A. Valentine in a black and white print dress with a black crêpe redingote, Mrs. Secor Cunningham in brown with touches of yellow, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster in black and turquoise, Mrs. William P. Martin in black crêpe, Mrs. Augustus K. Maxwell, and Mrs. Cummings.

All the furniture was removed from the huge drawing room, library and dining room of the Cyrus McCormick house to make room for the display of lovely linens and novelties from the Eli Bates settlement. There were lots of purchasers, most of them looking for things to brighten up summer homes, and the sale committee ladies were industriously wielding pencils across their order books.

Mrs. William McCormick Blair, one of the patrons of the settlement and a businesslike saleswoman, was on duty most of the day, wearing a black wool bolero frock with a white blouse and a black turban with a perky white feather and abbreviated veil. Others on the job were Mrs. Joseph T. Ryerson in black and green, Mrs. Charles Daniel Frey in a gray and white print dress and black hat, Mrs. James Forgan Jr. in brown, and Mrs. T. Philip Swift in brown and tan.

Some Other Benefits, Including That for Woman's Orchestra.

Futures—Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. Hubert Burnham, Mrs. Arthur Galt, Mrs. Morris K. Willson, and Mrs. Leslie Wheeler are receiving articles in their respective vicinities for the Grove House white elephant sale to be held at 619 Grove street, Evanston, tomorrow. . . Hostesses for the Woman's Symphony orchestra benefit at the Bendix gallery tomorrow include Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. Ernest R. Graham, Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, and Mrs. Albert J. Ochsner. . . . There is to be an Alliance Française reception in the Alliance rooms in the Fine Arts building on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock for Mrs. Orville Thompson and John Pane Gasser, who are to sing. . . . The Lake Shore League of Women Voters is having a meeting at the Tavern at 2:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon to hear Barclay Acheson speak on "Economic Conditions." . . . Mrs. Ralph E. Milman of Lake Forest will give an illustrated talk on "The Small Garden; Why and How" at a luncheon following the annual meeting of the Vassar club on Thursday, April 30, at the Fortnightly.

Christopher Morley Will Be Guest of Burt A. Massees.

Politely pertinent—Christopher Morley is to be the week-end house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Burt A. Massee [the Massees are to entertain at dinner for him on Saturday evening, and on Monday night he is to dine with Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Goodspeed before lecturing at Mandel hall, and afterwards is to attend the Tavern's "April Fooleries" at the Goodman theater]. . . . Mrs. James M. Hopkins Jr. has departed for the east to attend the Maryland hunt on Saturday and to be in New York City for a while thereafter. . . . Mrs. Oliver Dennett Grover is back from Detroit, having gone there to attend the opening of a memorial exhibit of the work of her brother, the late Julius Rolshoven, at the new Detroit Institute of Arts. . . . Mrs. Arthur Burrows of Lake Forest plans to take a house in Honolulu for the summer, and is to take her two children with her.

Froms and wheretos—Among those headed southward when Derby week comes around will be the Edgerton Throckmortons, attractive newcomers in Lake Forest, who are to fly down and meet the Fred Prestons in Louisville, also the Harold Strotzes and the David Pecks, who are motoring to French Lick first and then to Louisville. . . . The Richard Flemings and the Joseph Beautases have returned from several weeks in the south.

WOMEN LAUD IDEA OF YOUTH WEEK TO BEGIN MAY 17

The plan to enlarge Boys' week to include recognition of the activities of girls was acclaimed by women leaders of the city yesterday. The celebration is to be held May 17-23, with civic and industrial organizations coöperating with the Youth week program.

"Girls' achievements in Chicago rank right along with the boys', whether it be in the field of athletics, cultural, or industrial art," said Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, club leader and former president of the Woman's City club. "It will in no way detract from the honor done to boys, to make it a week for all the youth of the city."

Mrs. Langworthy has accepted a vice presidency of the Chicago Youth Week federation, as did Miss Jane Addams, Miss Mary B. Livingston, Mrs. S. T. Lawton, Mrs. Max Adler, Judge Mary Bartelme, Mrs. George W. Hansen, Mrs. Henry Hoyt Hilton, and Mrs. Murry Nelson.

Among coöperating agencies who will take part as girls' groups are Girl Scouts, Girl Reserves, Y. W. C. A., Camp Fire Girls, Salvation Army, Life Saving guards, Federation of Settlements, and Chicago Council of Social Agencies.

Nippon Royalty Visits Site of Signing of U. S. Declaration as Nation

Philadelphia, Pa., April 21.—(AP)—The Prince and Princess Takamatsu of Japan visited Philadelphia today on their honeymoon tour of the world and paid homage to the birthplace of American independence.

Greeted by a reception committee on their arrival from Washington early in the afternoon the imperial visitors and their party were escorted to city hall. There they were welcomed officially by Mayor Mackey. His private suite was decorated with American and Japanese flags, golden calla lilies and blue Japanese iris, the blossoms forming the city's colors of blue and gold.

Crowds cheered the prince and princess as, under police escort they motored to Independence hall, where other crowds awaited their arrival.

They were taken into the Independence room, where the Declaration was signed and where objects of historical interest were pointed out to them. Speaking briefly, Mayor Mackey said:

"Whatever impresses you as you travel across this country, remember that the United States was born here in this room."

The imperial couple touched the Liberty bell, whose significance was explained to them, then signed the register of distinguished guests, the first time this had been done since Marshal Foch visited Philadelphia.

The prince and princess were dinner guests tonight at the home of Roland S. Morris, former ambassador to Japan.

Tomorrow they will visit the Philadelphia navy yard. There they will be received by Rear Admiral Bostwick with a salute of 21 guns. At a luncheon of the Foreign Policy association in the afternoon the prince will speak briefly in reply to the address of welcome by Mr. Morris.

Food Talk.

"Fish, chicken, or capon and vegetables in aspic!"

Do you achieve the beautiful molded foods in your own kitchen, or do you think that only the magic hand of a skillful chef can do such artistic things in cookery? Aspics are very simply made. A good tasty meat stock made stiff enough with gelatin for molding is the substance in which the material is molded. A white stock made from veal or chicken is used to prepare aspic for fish. A brown stock aspic made from beef is used for meat aspics and either a white or brown aspic may be used for vegetables. To mold any food the aspic must be liquid. It is easily liquefied by setting it over hot water. If the mold is to be garnished with material near the surface, pour enough aspic in the mold to coat the mold at least ½ inch thick. Stand in a cold place to congeal.

When the coating is firm, dip each piece of garnishing material in hot aspic that is standing over hot water and put the garnish in place. When the garnish is in place, add more aspic, then add more vegetable, meat or fish, continuing until the mold is full but always allowing time for each layer to grow firm. Since aspic is transparent it is most important that the solid material be arranged neatly and with some artistic sense so that it will be attractive when the aspic is unmolded. Remember that the bottom of the molded material will be on top when it is unmolded. A little practice and care will enable anyone to make good looking aspic molds. They are time consuming because one must wait for the aspic to set. But they are worth it.

To unmold aspic wring a cloth from hot water and lay over the mold, patting it down with the hands. After one minute invert on the serving dish. The aspic should slip out easily. If not, repeat the process and be sure when you are unmolding to place the mold in the center of the dish. A delicate jelly cannot be easily moved. If unmolded on a paper dolly the jelly may be moved on the paper. To change the position on the plate, carefully replace the mold over the aspic, then invert together and separate the aspic from the plate with a spatula. Keep the aspic cold until served.

ASPIC JELLY.

2 tablespoons carrot cut in cubes.
2 tablespoons onion cut in cubes.
2 tablespoons celery cut in cubes.
2 sprigs parsley.
2 sprigs thyme.
1 sprig savory.
2 cloves.
½ teaspoon peppercorns.
1 bay leaf.
½ cup veal or chicken stock.
4 tablespoons granulated gelatin.
1 quart white or brown stock.
Juice of 1 lemon.
3 egg whites, slightly beaten.

Put vegetables, seasonings and ½ cup stock in saucepan; cook 20 minutes and strain, saving liquid. Add gelatin to stock, then add lemon juice and strained vegetable liquid. Season with salt and cayenne and add egg whites slowly to mixture, stirring constantly until boiling point is reached. Place over low heat and let stand 30 minutes. Strain through a fine wire strainer placed over a larger fine wire lined with a double thickness of cheesecloth.

EMBARRASSING MOMENTS

Car Refused to Budge.

Recently I was in the market for a new automobile and wanted to turn my old one in on the new one.

I was making the usual rounds of the agencies, but was not satisfied with the prices they quoted on the old car. I finally convinced one salesman that my old car was very good and that I would be back later in the day to have it in and get the new one.

Imagine my embarrassment when I tried to put my car right in front of the door and it wouldn't start. I had to leave it there until I got some one to take it home for me. Needless to say, I did not go back for the new car. C. R. H.

Bright Sayings of the Children

Dorothy had never seen a man with a beard. One day we stopped at a farmhouse to buy some vegetables, and she saw a man with a long white board. No amount of coaxing would make her get out of the car.

When we drove away she pointed at the old gentleman and whispered in my ear, "I'm afraid of that man. He looks like a bow bow!" E. C. H.

Recently while taking care of my nephew, aged 7, I said, "Junior, I think I should give you a spanking."

"Why?" asked Junior.

"O, just on general principles."

To my own, as well as my sister's amusement, he answered, "Well, my mother doesn't believe in corporal punishment." P. B.

Elizabeth Arden's newest treatment
THE ARDENA BATH

Away with those extra pounds you are dragging around—the bunchy hip-cushions that threaten the success of your newest frock! And the fatty padding that is settling between your shoulder blades—the "thickish" look of your upper arm—the too heavy bust—they shall be banished, too.

Miss Arden's important new treatment is attacking these undesirable accumulations of fat tissue with extraordinary success. A course of treatments will permanently eliminate as much as twenty pounds if need be. Or your weight will be re-distributed, for the beauty of this treatment is it can be concentrated on your "fatty spots" without affecting the rest of your figure.

But the Ardena Bath is far more than a reducing treatment. It seems to reach down to the very roots of your nerves and free them of tenseness and fatigue. If you are feeling the little aches and pains that come from accumulated poisons, it is a positive sign that you are in need of this treatment.

A body massage afterwards maintains your feeling of well-being. And when you step on the scales you find you are appreciably lighter

The Ardena Bath Treatments are so much in demand that appointments should be made at least two days in advance if possible. And you should arrange first for an interview with Miss Arden's Director of Exercise since all of Miss Arden's scientific body treatments are specially prescribed for each individual. For an appointment, please telephone Superior 6952.

Empire State Building Wins Architect Honor

New York, April 21.—[Special.]—The Empire State building has won for its designer a gold medal of honor from the Artchitectural league. At the Architectural and Allied Arts exposition in Grand Central palace today announcement was made of the annual awards of the league.

Two gold medals for distinguished accomplishment in architecture were awarded this year instead of the usual one. William F. Lamb of the firm of Shreve, Lamb & Harmon was given one "for the masterful treatment of an office building as exemplified by the Empire State building."

To Eliel Saarinon, Finnish architect, went another gold medal "for the distinguished quality of his work in the Cranbrook Foundation" at Cranbrook, Mich. Only once before—in 1926—has the league awarded two gold medals for architecture simultaneously.

This year's silver medal in architecture went to the firm of Peabody, Wilson & Brown for a group of residences illustrated at the Architectural and Allied Arts exposition.

The medal of honor in sculpture was won by Lee Lawrie of New York with "the outstanding decorative quality and inventiveness of design shown in his work" in the Architectural and Allied Arts exposition, "and in consideration of the distinguished character of his past achievements."

The medal of honor in painting was awarded this year to John W. Norton for his paintings now installed in the Tavern club in Chicago.

The medal of honor in native industrial art was awarded to Eugene Schoen for a metal and glass building entrance.

Among the exhibits is a model of a house designed as suitable for the needs of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It has its own landing field, and the hangar, like the garage, is built into the house.

Avoid Harsh Effects of Straws 'n Fabrics If You'd Be Feminine

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Yesterday, being in a spring clothes mood, I talked about beauty from the dress-aid angle. And I spoke of the advantages of possession or cultivation of that sixth sense that prevents women from buying materials and accessories that "harden" the appearance. I think first of a certain straw hat, shiney of surface, or indeed, it may be a flat, dull color, usually blue or black. Anyway, it's as uncompromising as a prohibition fanatic. And just about as sweet in appeal. It may be smart—but some one wisely said that smartly tailored women may be admired but their style is not loved.

And there's nothing out of the way in tying the love angle up with clothes, either, since the money is spent to attract or hold some Big Boy interest, isn't it the truth? I'm not talking about hats and things for young women, for you can let their soft young cheeks and profiles take care of any mistakes they make. It's of us older ones who, each succeeding year, have to do a bit of subtle planning to take down the hard edges that I am speaking.

About the tailored suits being shown plentifully this year, they're good style and practical and with the right feminine charactered blouse and a soft straw hat or fabric or crocheted hat are fine. But don't let yourself go masculine in them, for again you get that effect of harshness—and unnovaceness.

Now, I was out the other night and saw illustrated the appeal in clothes that I mean. There was a stunning black haired siren in a hard surfaced unrelieved black satin evening frock. An elegant dress. She wore shoulder length earrings of hard, brilliant stones. She wasn't especially young. Her face bore the "life lived" look.

Late in the season though it was for velvets, her rival, a woman about the same age, was there in one with long, floor sweeping skirt. A bit frumpy, you may have said. But just the same, she had the "come on" softness of sheer feminine appeal. Naturally, you don't have to look like a frump to have it. You can be most thoroughly chic and still have that feminine something which can make an inexpensive copy outshine an original model. And this most assuredly is the 1931 dress-beauty demand.

Fears Sometimes Account for Child's Unusual Behavior

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

Hang fears out in the air and sunshine and they will disappear—or if they don't disappear they will shrink to normal size and be seen for what they are. Applied psychology uses this method in dealing with the neuroses of adults—and parents should try to use it in dealing with the fears of their children. This applies to fears which we can observe on the surface and also to fears which give signs of their existence only indirectly, through some unaccountable behavior.

When we can see the children change in their ways, when we see a certain sort of behavior persisting and have run every clew to earth, it is often a good plan as a last resort to dig around and see if your child has been frightened.

The easiest fears to deal with are those which are obvious. If a child has one evident fear, like the fear of dogs, we can usually discover, or if not discover, be quite safe in guessing that he has been frightened by a dog. By various means we can dissipate this fear in a quite direct way. We can get him used to dogs by showing him engaging pictures, stories about dogs and their ways, their devotion and heroism, and by giving him a chance to make friends with puppies and grown dogs perhaps by owning them.

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Lack School Clothes.

"Is there a possibility of your being able to secure clothing for two of our pupils, boys 10 and 12 years of age? They have had to stay away from school because they have nothing to wear and they lose much by their absence. They wear sizes 12 and 13.

"S. M. D."

It doesn't seem quite right that these boys must remain away from school because they haven't sufficient clothing to wear while other children discard clothing with much service left in them. These boys could put such garments to good use.

FARM and GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

TOMATOES FOR JULY 4TH.

Some home garden tomatoes for that Fourth of July picnic lunch are easily possible when advantage is taken of the early growing season around Chicagoland, according to W. B. Ward, horticulturist of Purdue university.

He suggests getting the seed started in hotbeds or frames at least six weeks before transplanting to the garden or field, which should be as soon as the weather warms the soil. Two ounces of seed will provide enough plants normally to set out an acre of tomatoes, he warns those who are amateurs in growing their own plants.

In southern Indiana the plants usually can be set out about May 1, about May 10 for the central portions of the state and May 20 for the northern section, with somewhat later dates appropriate for northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

"Hotcaps" can be used if they are necessary for protection against cool weather and chilling rains after transplanting from the seedbed to the garden. A handful of plant food worked into the soil around each plant gives good results.

Apron Motif Runs Through New Styles

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The apron motif runs right through the gamut of the new Paris fashions, beginning with Schiaparelli's knee length "pinny" of dark green linen worn over a white cotton trouser frock for morning, passing through Martial et Armand's tricky apron draperies on afternoon gowns to the grand climax of Chanel's "parlor maid apron" frock for elaborate evening occasions.

This frock, which achieves something absolutely new in evening silhouettes, is sketched for you today. The skirt is in five tiers of crushed strawberry lace stiffened toward the back with horse hair net. An oval apron of the strawberry lace, just like those frivolous articles worn by French soubrettes in witty modern plays, is outlined by two shaped incrustations of the lace. It mounts to form the bodice, which shows the new chemise décolleté in front, while in back it ends with its narrow shoulder straps, being cut down in a point to the waistline.

Note the outstanding back movement of this gown and its shorter hem, for both are typical of Chanel's latest manner; also the fact that crushed strawberry is one of her feature colors.

SOX MEET INDIANS IN HOME INAUGURAL TODAY

LANDIS' RULE OF BASEBALL UPHELD BY COURT

COMMISSIONER'S RULINGS FINAL, JUDGE DECIDES

Milwaukee, St. Louis Suit Dismissed.

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley yesterday upheld the baseball dictatorship of Kenesaw Mountain Landis, to whom he ascribed the powers of an "absolute despot," in deciding a case involving for the first time a test of the commissioner's authority.

Judge Lindley dismissed for want of equity a suit brought by the Milwaukee club of the American association and the St. Louis Browns of the American league for an injunction restraining the commissioner from declaring Fred Bennett, who has been termed "the Dred Scott of baseball," a free agent.

Bennett, an outfielder, was sold by the Tulsa club of the Western league to the St. Louis Browns in 1928, only to be returned to Tulsa first on option and then on outright release during the same year. At the end of the season, Bennett was sold by Tulsa to Milwaukee, but he didn't report to that club, as his contract was sold to the Wichita Falls club of the Texas league.

Leslie Thwarts Farm System.

Bennett played throughout the 1929 season with Wichita Falls and in September was sold to St. Louis. In April, 1930, St. Louis released him on option sale to Milwaukee. Commissioner Landis then stepped in and ruled that Bennett had been kept in control of the St. Louis Browns' "farm system" for the limit of two years as prescribed by the major-minor league agreements. Bennett brought suit to enjoin Commissioner Landis from interfering with his optional contract with St. Louis. The Browns retained the right to recall, but by stipulation Bennett finished the season with Milwaukee. The Milwaukee club filed a supplemental bill and Bennett filed an intervening petition, asking to free himself from his contractual relationships with the two clubs.

Cites Commissioner's Power.

"The various agreements and rules, constituting a complete code for, or charter and by-laws of, organized baseball in America, disclose a clear intent upon the part of the parties to endow the commissioner with all the attributes of a benevolent but absolute despot, and all the disciplinary powers of the proverbial pater familias."

The decision cited the findings of the commissioner that Phil Ball, president of the St. Louis Browns, had, since Feb. 16, 1928, exercised through stock ownership complete control of the Wichita Falls and St. Louis clubs, and since Jan. 19, 1929, complete control of the Milwaukee club.

Points Out Violation.

The commissioner found that since the time of his outright purchase by St. Louis Bennett had had two successive seasons of minor league baseball with clubs controlled by Ball, during which time St. Louis could have applied him at any time, "just as actually as if it had retained ownership." Nevertheless, it was argued, St. Louis proposed to transfer Bennett for the third successive season without securing waivers from other major league teams.

"The commissioner rightfully held," Judge Lindley ruled, "that common control of the St. Louis club and the other named clubs by one person made it possible to create a situation whereby the clear intent of the agreed code that the players under control of a major league club should not be kept with a minor league club for more than two successive seasons without giving other major league clubs the right to claim him, was clearly violated."

Attorneys for the Milwaukee and St. Louis clubs indicated that they would appeal the case.

BUSH NAMES PAT CARAWAY FOR PITCHING TASK

Hose Will Present Stronger Infield.

Opening Day Facts

Teams—Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians.
Time—3 p. m.
Pitchers—Pat Caraway, Sox; Mel Harder, Cleveland.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox will open their 1931 home baseball season at Comiskey park today against Cleveland, with a fair chance of repaying the Indians for that opening game defeat at Cleveland a week ago. A beneficent drop in temperature at St. Louis yesterday gave Manager Donie Bush's pitching staff a rest by preventing the final game of the series with the Browns, and as a result the 30,000 Sox fans who are expected to welcome the Hose home should see them at their best, or as near their best as early season injuries will permit.

Caraway was scheduled to pitch yesterday, with Tommy Thomas heading the reception committee for opening day ceremonies. Thomas, however, in the two games in which he has pitched since the season opened, has shown none of the zip which characterized his work of other years, and Bush was not at all displeased by the opportunity to have the Sox make their debut here with Caraway doing the honors.

Mel Harder, who beat the Sox in one of the three games which they lost in the first series at Cleveland, probably will oppose Caraway.

Show Big Improvement.

Although the Sox machine is a bit out of whack just now because of mishaps, Bush will introduce a team that in a few more weeks should prove itself a vast improvement over white hosed outfits of recent years. There has been a marked strengthening all along the line, particularly in the infield, which last season was no more formidable than a paper bag.

One big reason for the inner defenses having assumed a big league complexion is Lu Blue, the ex-Brownie, at first base. Blue is not at his best because of a lack of spring conditioning, but despite this handicap he already proved himself a welcome addition. His presence is not only being felt in the field but at bat. In the games played thus far he's managed to get to base in about three of four attempts, so it is pretty certain that he is not going to be removed from the lead off notch in the batting order.

Cissell Going Strong.

Bill Cissell also is making himself prominent as a member of the revamped infield. The former shortstop has been doing a better job of second basing than some reputed stars could turn out. He is fast on his feet and can go far in either direction for batted balls. If he can keep up that work for a full season Bill is going to get himself into the big salary class.

Appling, the young shortstop from Atlanta, thus far knocked the eyes right out of all the veteran baseball men who have seen him in operation. No less an authority than Jim Austin, the Brown's coach and former infielder, is the latest to stamp the youth as a budding great.

Appling handles himself without apparent effort. He always manages to be where he can grab the bounders on the easy hop. In throwing he is 100 per cent perfect. After he and Cissell have worked together a bit more, they should dvelop into a formidable double play combination, which is something the Sox haven't had for years.

Appling Starts to Hit.

Appling didn't get off to a flying start with his bat, but unlike many players he didn't let it annoy him. He kept right on swinging and in the last two games played, he began to connect as he did in the spring battles with the Giants. His favorite hits are liners into the open space between right and center fields.

Simons, the $30,000 center fielder from Louisville, still is somewhat light on attack, but Bush isn't thinking of benching him. The lad hasn't been in the best of health and if he doesn't start hitting inside of another week or ten days he may be given a rest. Eichrodt can take over the center field job as soon as he is relieved from subbing for the ailing Jolley. The latter should be available any day now.

FRENCH BOXERS GET READY FOR CHICAGO TRIP

10 Sail for Golden Glove Bouts in Week.

BY DON MAXWELL.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 21.—Final preparations are being rushed for the departure of the French amateur boxing champions. A team of ten will sail for America a week from tomorrow to battle the intercity champions at Chicago on May 12.

The fighters were instructed today to hasten their passports to Paris for vises. Rene Pujol, secretary of the French boxing federation, is arranging final details. He and other members of the federation will accompany the team to Havre to bid the boys bon voyage as they board the liner France.

Team Numbers Ten.

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE asked the federation to send twelve fighters, but French amateur leaders decided that only ten qualified to uphold French prestige against the American Golden Gloves team. The eight who are expected to represent France in the ring include six champions and two non-champions, the latter being selected because the federation believed they excelled those who actually were awarded the titles, thereby frankly recognizing a fact which professional boxing commissions often ignore—namely: that champions sometimes are not the best fighters.

The team represents the pick of 2,000 boxers who competed in the national tournament, the finals of which were held in Paris a week ago. Three of the fighters are Parisians—Fernand Laudrin, heavyweight champion; Alex Elyas, light heavyweight, and Robert Tourquet, welterweight. Laudrin is a soldier and Tourquet is a gendarme.

Two Hail from Limoges.

Andre Perrier, flyweight, and Marcel Esnault, a substitute, come from Limoges, a great porcelain center, but they disclaim porcelain chins. Jean Zigan, middleweight, hails from the Jura mountains. Mayor, a lightweight, is another mountaineer, coming from the Pyrenees, where Uzcudun formerly harassed trees.

Lerat, the featherweight, who is a Norman apple knocker, plans to look into the American apple market conducted by the unemployed. Two youngsters, Bryere and Adrey, the regular bantamweight and the alternate, come from the war zone.

Fans Pick Canzoneri to Beat Berg—If He Can Land Early

BY WILFRID SMITH.

JACK BERG.

Canzoneri, victor by knockout over Al Singer, who deposed the lightweight king, Sammy Mandell, after he had reigned four years, must defeat Berg to win the N. B. A. belt. Berg may keep his junior welterweight belt even in defeat, for he won the honor by defending his title in Chicago against Goldie Hess.

Fans Pick Canzoneri Early.

Well, who will win the lightweight title Friday night?

The consensus seems to be Canzoneri to win by a knockout, and win early. If the battle goes the scheduled ten rounds the fans almost to a man pick Berg.

This is easily explained. Berg forces the fighting, a miniature hurricane in his flurry of attack. None of his opponents in this country since he landed with Mushy Callahan's junior welter scalp dangling at his waist has been able to outpoint the London Hebrew. He just naturally piles up points so rapidly no fighter can keep pace.

So far 12,000 fans have signified intention they will watch the battle. The Stadium publicly points out that 10,000 more seats are available. Considering that the top price is $10.80, almost double the usual scale, Chicago evidently is more interested in Canzoneri and Berg than in any recent professional offering.

Canzoneri has been impressive in his training at the Loop gymnasium. He has shown a keen judgment of distance and a punch which has force. But Tony always did have a punch. It is idle to point out that a punch in the gymnasium does not mean a punch in the ring, and Tony's training companions have not been of exceptional caliber.

Tony's record of late years also has its soft spots. He was soundly whipped by Billy Petrolle in the Stadium ring, his last Chicago appearance, while Kid Berg disposed of Petrolle in addition to Kid Chocolate, Bill Wallace, Goldie Hess and several high grade second raters.

Kid Berg is an Englishman's only excuse for getting excited over boxing. Other British champions have not been able to stand world wide competition, but the Jewish boy has London's population in a fever, if Trevor Wignall, a London sports editor, is to be believed. Wignall and a battalion of eastern writers will be here Friday night to detail the fight blow by blow.

Fink Directs Tony.

Maxie Rosenbloom and his manager, Frank Bachman, Joie Jacobs, Schmeling's manager, and Pa Stribling, who has been in Cleveland looking over training sites for the heavyweight embroglio in July, are reported as ring side ticket holders for the Friday fight.

Lou Fink, remembered in Chicago as the trainer of Gene Tunney, when he defended his heavyweight crown at Soldiers' field against Jack Dempsey, is directing Canzoneri's activities this week. Fink favors Canzoneri to win, but that is no criterion, since he is training the lightweight champ.

Nate Lewis, Stadium matchmaker, is proud of the card of supporting bouts he has assembled. Three eight round contests and two fours are on the bill. The eight rounders feature lightweights. Roger Bernard, who meets Harry Dublinski, is one of the best battlers in the division, although he really is a 130 pounder. The bout is a return engagement.

Tony Herrara and Steve Halaiko, Buffalo's contribution to the division, will meet in one of the eights. Ralph Lenny, a sensation in his Chicago performances, will meet Lou Abella, stablemate of Canzoneri. Ed Steeve, former Golden Gloves middleweight intercity winner, now a 175 pound fighter, will box four rounds with Mickey Patrick. Natie Brown and Joe Dokter complete the card.

17,250 WATCH LONDOS WIN IN STRAIGHT FALLS

McMillen Pins Grobmier in Semi-Windup.

BY HARVEY WOODRUFF.

Wrestling, aspiring to major pretentions as a Chicago sport, was offered at the Stadium last night for the first time in the history of the west side amphitheater. The response satisfied the promoters and surprised nearly every one else when a near capacity crowd passed through the gates to a card of six bouts in which Jim Londos and Jim McMillen were the victors of the final and semi-final, respectively.

Illinois athletic commission figures were announced as 17,250 spectators with a gross gate receipt of $34,419.

A Good Show.

It was a good show for the crowd. There were times when hardened cynics insisted the showmanship was better and truer than the show, but the crowd at least enjoyed the gladiatorial spectacles and was as enthusiastic as those which viewed hockey, boxing, bike races, and indoor football at the same location.

Whether this large crowd was attracted in part by curiosity is beside the point, for it was there and it was of different caliber from those assemblages of a few years ago when the mat sport went into oblivion and disrepute following the Gotch-Hackenschmidt fiasco at White Sox park. Fully as many women, perhaps more than have become regulars at boxing shows, were in attendance.

This enthusiastic crowd, relishing in four preliminaries the rough work of modern wrestling which tolerates tactics allowed in no other sport, was in keen humor when Jim Londos, one of the two recognized heavyweight champions, met Kola Kwariana in the feature bout put on as the semi-final.

Londos Wins Easily.

Londos won two straight falls, the first with a toe hold following an airplane spin in 57:39. The Russian cossack returned to the mat limping from the leg wrenching he had received in the first fall. He quickly succumbed to a cross body hold, preceded by another airplane trip and nose dive, in 3:41.

Both Londos and Kwariani at times during the savage proceedings broke holds which appeared devastating but Londos evidently knew more, either in wrestling or in strategy, and there never was a time when one thought he would not win.

Jim McMillen, former Illini, won in the windup against Fred Grobmier in a bout announced as for one fall of thirty minutes. In this playful encounter, Jim tossed his opponent out of the ring on one occasion and Fred succeeded in producing a bloody countenance by projecting his elbows

Risko Wins Decision Over King Levinsky

Risko kept Levinsky's powerful right tied up during the 10 round contest and punished him severely with heavy body punches. Risko weighed 192½, Levinsky 183. There were no knockdowns.

Levinsky tried hard throughout, but he was never able to elude Risko's powerful blows to the short ribs in his wild rushes for close quarters. Risko's work was always efficient, but never spectacular. Late in the contest Levinsky tried to launch a heavy two fisted attack on Risko's head, but the experienced Johnny lured him into a clinch and checkmated him with his monotonous body punching.

Boxers Finish Training for A. A. U. Bouts

Sixty-four boxers who will compete in the semi-finals and finals for Central A. A. U. championships at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night completed training yesterday.

The elimination bouts run off at the I. A. C. have left only the topnotchers in each division, the best amateur boxers from the states of Illinois, Wisconsin, and Minnesota. The boys have as their first incentive a trip to New York to represent this division in the national championships. If they survive the nationals they have a trip to Europe in store for them, as from the national winners a team will be selected to represent the United States in a number of exhibitions abroad this summer.

The committee, under the guidance of Roy Davis and George Donoghue, put the final night of boxing in the Stadium so that the public will have a chance to attend. The advance ticket sale has been brisk, but there are still a number of good seats obtainable.

SUNDAY BALL LOSES, 101-99, IN PENNSYLVANIA

Harrisburg, Pa., April 21.—(AP)—An attempt to amend the Sunday blue laws to permit Sunday baseball between 2 p. m. and 5:30 p. m., was defeated in the house today by a vote of 99 in favor and 101 against the proposal.

The proposal came up while a bill was being considered to extend the time for the delivery of milk from 9 a. m. to 10 a. m. Representative G. A. Sowers, Philadelphia, moved to amend the bill by including the legalization of Sunday baseball, and a long debate followed.

Philadelphia and Pittsburgh are the only major league cities where the big circuits do not play ball on Sunday.

That Eton Blue of Whitney Is Money Winning Choice

BY FRENCH LANE.

Who? Why the king's hawses, of course.

But who is the king whose silk racing jacket will be carried so jauntily in the parade leading to the 1931 turf championship?

We'll have to call upon our trusty old binoculars, which have been seeing things that are going to happen six months from now, to get the answer.

It is not an easy undertaking. For Mr. Binoculars is asked to tell us what racing stable of the three or four hundred striving for the honors will rule supreme over the 1931 affairs of the American turf.

That Eton Blue.

So the king must be Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney of New York. An Eton blue jacket and brown cap has always been a Whitney turf symbol.

It will not be unusual for the Whitney horses to rule the roost in turfdom. Back as far as 1903 there came a Whitney year when horses racing in the same Eton blue jacket and brown cap for W. C. Whitney, the grand daddy of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, carried away the honors.

Ten years later, in 1913, the horses sporting the Eton blue and brown conquered all rivals and finished on top. On this occasion they were running for Harry Payne Whitney, father of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney. In 1924, in 1926, in 1927, in 1929 and in 1930 they did the same thing. Before the honors were won in 1930 Harry Payne Whitney died and the Eton blue jacket and the brown cap passed on to another Whitney generation, to Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney.

So by the statistics you can see that our faithful old friend, Mr. Binoculars may be making his selection strictly on past performances.

Has Four Divisions.

But I'll have to string right along with Mr. Binoculars this season.

It will include more than 100 of the best bred horses in training. It will be divided into four divisions.

One division will race in New York. Another will campaign in Chicago. Still another will go for the prizes in Canada. And the other will seek gold and glory in Kentucky.

The star of the stable will be Equipoise, which may win $100,000 or more before the season hardly gets under way and he could gather in considerably more than a quarter million dollars if he should duplicate the record of Gallant Fox last year.

Famous trainers are in charge of the Whitney horses and famous jockeys ride them. The old master, Thomas Healy, will supervise the main division in New York. Sonny Workman and Arthur Robertson will ride

How long has it been since you last drove or rode in a brand-new, spotless, dentless, jerkless, knockless automobile? Have you forgotten that a ride in a motor car really can be an enjoyable experience in itself? Or are you so used to your old mode of transportation that you assume all riding and driving must be like what you're used to?

It isn't. In addition to all the usual attractions of a new automobile, there are many things about the new models this year that add hitherto unknown comfort and enjoyment to motoring. It seems that the auto makers have been expending extra effort to make their wares attractive. They've thought up a lot of improvements that never were offered before. And the best thing about it is the fact that they haven't added it in the bill. Automobiles today, value considered, are selling at the lowest prices ever.

To find out what we mean, visit the auto dealer most convenient for you. This week is a good time because dealers throughout the city and county are putting on their Spring Auto Show. Drop in today or tomorrow and get the low-down on the 1931 automobile situation.

LICENSE BOARD BARS 5 JOCKEYS AND 5 TRAINERS

Verlyn Smith Under Age; Gets Papers in July.

Five jockeys and five trainers failed to get licenses when the members of the Illinois Turf association license committee held its annual meeting here yesterday.

Application of twenty-one other trainers and eight jockeys were held up for further consideration, many of them widely known on Chicago tracks in other seasons.

The trainers whose applications for licenses were denied are Jack Carter, Edward Hayward, R. E. Malone, Louis Meripol, and Frank L. Wilson. The jockeys who failed to get the O. K. of the Illinois Turf association license board were William Dalzell, Anthony Francesco, Stanley Lipiec, George Pflanz, and Verlyn Smith. The last three named jockeys were denied licenses because they are under age. Smith, a star, will be 16 years old in July and will then receive his license, the members of the committee explained.

Board Tables Applications.

In their move to make the Illinois racing rules the most stringent in America and to protect the sport on Chicago tracks, the applications of the following trainers were held up for further consideration:

William Anderson, Fred P. Barry, J. H. Cook, Louis De Carlo, Thomas Downs, Charles H. Enloe, Julius Goedecke Jr., Edwin L. Goods, W. E. Gough, Clarence Lawrence, Frank C. McAtee, Kenneth W. McIntosh, James P. O'Donovan, Henry O'Neil, Sam Olson, Emil A. Radtke, C. W. Ross, N. N. Shammas, Harry W. Weis, Harry G. White, and Richard Wells.

The jockeys whose applications for licenses were held up for further consideration were C. E. Allen, O. C. Atwell, John Moore, Dent Smith, Delmar Cox, John Fisher, Cedric Nelson, and M. E. Tucker.

Several Hundred Approved.

Several hundred applications for licenses were approved. Among the more noted jockeys licensed were La Verne Fator, C. Corbett, Earl Pool, R. Morrison, E. James, C. Meyers, P. Gross, W. Fronk, M. Rose, E. Neal, P. Neal, J. Marcum, Earl Steffan, H. R. Riley, J. McCoy, Frank Chinvetta, Steve O'Donnell, R. Mozer, R. Fisher, J. Bejshak, B. Hanford, W. Day, Mack Garner, R. Cooper, T. Luther, R. Some slight changes in the claiming rules were adopted before the meeting of the committee ended. Except to specify those denied license because of being under age the members of the committee gave no cause for holding up the other applications.

Binoculars See Whitney Stable as Best

them. Healy will likely rush his entire forces west for the Arlington Park meeting in July. Fred Hopkins, a young fellow who has developed several famous horses, is in command of the other eastern division. In the west Mose Goldblatt of Cincinnati will direct the Whitney interests in Kentucky. John Lowe, a noted horseman, will be racing Whitney horses in Chicago when Healy or Hopkins are not here.

Boojum Ready to Go.

The Whitney people have patched up Boojum to strive for the prizes in the older division. They couldn't ask for much more than Equipoise in the 3 year old class. They'll soon uncover some 2 year olds which will be right there when the great Futurity and other rich juvenile events are run.

A few other stables have a chance to stop the Whitney victory parade.

George D. Widener could do it. He has Jamestown. This colt beat Equipoise every time they lined up at the barrier together last year. If Mr. Widener can develop a 2 year old of top class this youngster and Jamestown might win more money than all the 100 or more Whitney horses.

If there were a good 3 year old colt in the John Hertz stable we would say that this young turf establishment from Chicago might make it interesting for the Whitney crowd. There are some very promising 2 year olds in the Hertz string. Risque should be on top or near the top in the 3 year old filly race. Valenciennes, another from the Hertz stable will be fighting for the honors in the older division.

But the stable that wins the high money honors this year must have a 3 year old colt capable of capturing some of the $50,000 3 year old specials. There doesn't seem to be a colt of that caliber in the Hertz string.

Harry Sinclair's Rancocas stable may be falling apart. When it was heading the Whitneys a few years back for money winning prizes Sam Hildreth was training the horses. Earl Sande and Laverne Fator were riding them. Hildreth has died. Sande has retired. Fator has quit Rancocas and has gone to work for Col. Edward R. Bradley.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's horses, including Twenty Grand, the fleet 3 year old, will win a lot of races but not enough perhaps to head Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's bid for the title. Belair stud, Joseph E. Widener, William E. Zeigler, W. R. Coe, and Walter Jeffords are some of the other owners who might make it a bleak year for the Whitney connections should they get a break in the luck and develop a champion or two.

Mr. Binoculars keeps whispering "Eton blue jacket and brown cap." That means Whitney and a Whitney year. Should the truf house of Whitney fall then I know Mr. Binoculars is in need of quite a lengthy vacation.

Tomorrow the article in this series will give you the name of the champion jockey of the year.

RING LARDNER HEARS FROM WILLIS CLOUGH

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 21.—Dear friend, well here I am in my new home and it is a kind of a pretty town only they have got a lot of cigar factorys here and there is a lot of smoke, —I guess on account of the employs trying out the cigars.—Paul Waner asked me how did I like the town and I said I liked it fine only there was so much smoke and he says that is just what you need.—I thought of coarse we was all going to stop at a hotel like in the other towns we been in but it seems that all the boys has their own homes here or else they stop in a boarding house or hotel here wile the club is at home but they have to pay their own expenses in place of the club paying our expenses like when we are on the road.

I asked Paul Waner if he knew of any hotel or boarding house where I could stop which was not too expensive and he says if I was you I would just walk around town nights for a wile and see the sites and sleep on the bench during the afternoon but I told him I can't sleep very good setting down and he says why don't you try it standing up. I made the remark to Comorosky that it was a lucky break we did not have no game scheduled the first day we got here and he says they ranged that on purpose as they probably figured you would need a rest.

After the boys were properly enraged they began flopping around the ring in cartwheels. Then McMillen butted his opponent over three times in what he has established as flying tackles, and finally toppled to the mat on top of Grobmier for a body lock fall in 21:44.

Smith, Bauer Draw.

In the preliminaries Jack Smith of Chicago and Hans Bauer of Germany drew in twenty minutes. Rudy Dusek of Omaha pinned Billy Evans, the Oklahoma Indian, in 8:20 with a body slam. Karl Pojello flopped Charley Fox with a body hold in 13:19.

In the roughest bout of the night, featured by forward passes, spinners from a split buck and double reverses, besides every rough and punishing hold in the mat category, Frank Bronowicz won the decision after thirty minutes rough housing against George Zaharies, to whom he was conceding weight. The latter declined to shake hands following the decision.

YANKEES SCORE 10 IN 2 INNINGS; BEAT A'S, 12 TO 1

Pennock Holds Champs to 7 Hits.

New York, April 21.—(AP)—The combined wildness of three Philadelphia pitchers enabled the Yankees to pile up ten runs in the first two innings today and then coast on to a 12 to 1 victory over the Athletics. Herb Pennock pitched a fine game for New York, allowing only seven hits. Three of them were bunched for the only Athletic run in the ninth.

Mahaffey started for the A's and, after giving two runs in the first inning and two more hits in the second, gave way to Carter. The second youngster gave four walks and a single before retiring in favor of Ed Rommel, who finished the game. Rommel passed two men at the start, making six walks and eight runs for the inning, but steadied down, and homers by Lary and Cooke brought the remaining Yankee tallies.

Cleveland, O., April 21.—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians won a 5 to 4 decision over the Detroit Tigers today after Jonathan Stone, Tiger outfielder, had tied the score in the first half of the ninth inning by hitting a home run over the fence with two on bases. It gave the Indians a 2 to 1 margin in the series.

Vic Sorrell walked Hunnefield in the ninth and was charged with the defeat, although replaced by Herring, who walked Burnett and was hit for a single by Fonseca which scored the decking run. Wesley Ferrell got credit for his second victory by stopping the ninth inning Detroit rally, which spelled a prospective second straight shut out for Clint Brown. Sims's home run was his third in three games. Score:

SENATORS SWAMP RED SOX.

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—Walter Johnson's Senators made it two out of three in the series with the Boston Red Sox by romping away with the final game today by a 12 to 3 count. Batting hard behind the seven hit pitching of Fred Marberry, who was making his first start of the year, the Senators staged a form reversal to avenge yesterday's drubbing.

The home team made 16 hits, including homers by Bluege and Myer of Brillheart in the third inning, each with one on base. After Gaston and Brillheart had yielded 13 hits between them in four innings, big Ed Morris stopped the Senators for three innings, but they later got to Walter Murphy for three more safeties and two runs in the eighth.

Two errors by Joe Cronin, Washington short stop, proved costly. Score:

Phils' Rally in 3d Defeats Robins, 7 to 3

Philadelphia, Pa., April 21.—(AP)—Jumbo Jim Elliott gave the Phillies some first class pitching today and they backed it with effective hitting to beat the Brooklyn Robins, 7 to 3, in the series final. Elliott allowed only nine hits and kept them well scattered.

Babe Herman gave Brooklyn a one run lead with a homer in the third inning, but muffed Klein's fly in the same inning and allowed a Philly run to score. Four hits were combined with the error to bring in four runs. The rally drove Fred Heimach, Brooklyn starting pitcher, from the mound. Moss finished the inning and Gallivan hurled the rest of the game for Brooklyn. Buzz Arlett hit a homer for the Phils in the seventh with Whitney on base. Score:

Boston, Mass., April 21.—(AP)—Behind the fine five hit pitching of Southpaw Ed Brandt, the Braves defeated the New York Giants today, 5 to 1, and gained an even break in the four game series.

The Braves fell on Pete Donohue in the first and sixth innings, putting together five hits for three runs. They added another pair of runs off 19 year old Harold Schumacher in the eighth. Lindstrom drove in the only Giant run in the first inning, when Richbourg lost sight of the ball in a cloud of smoke from the nearby railroad and it fell safe for a triple. Score:

WRISTLOCK AND HANDCUFF BEAT WRESTLER TWICE

Chief War Eagle, who wrestles as a "full blooded Cherokee Indian, when he isn't wrestling as plain Barefoot Billy Evans of Oklahoma, lost two bouts in a row last night at the Chicago Stadium, where he appeared on Promoter Doc Krone's wrestling program.

Chief War Eagle lost his first bout, according to schedule, to Rudy Dusek. Dusek pounced on him and pinned his shoulders to the mat with a wrist lock in exactly eight minutes and then, as he was leaving the ring, Sergt. Rudolph Freemont and Sergt. John Joyce of the detective bureau pounced on him again and clamped a handcuff on him in something less than eight minutes.

Evans was locked up at the detective bureau at the request of Sheriff Joe Francis of Green Bay, Wis., who said he was wanted there for jumping a $10 board bill.

FLEMING BEATEN BY SCHWIETZKA IN CUE UPSET

Champaign, Ill., April 21.—[Special.]—Walter A. Schwietzka of Champaign again supplied an upset in the national amateur three cushion billiard tournament when he defeated Frank I. Fleming, also of Champaign, at the Elks club tonight, 50 to 41, in 60 innings. His high run was 5, Fleming's 4.

Robert B. Harper of Denver, defending champion, and Joseph Hall, last year's tournament winner, were winners today. Harper scored his second straight triumph when he defeated Anthony N. Cleal of Beaumont, Tex., 50 to 27, in 65 innings. Hall defeated Lewis M. Vogler of Indianapolis in the final night game, 50 to 20, in 52 innings. The other game was won by Vogler, who came from behind to defeat H. N. Purdy of Atlanta, 50 to 43, in 69 innings.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BIG TEN AND N. C. A.

FROM all that the official statement contained following Saturday's meeting of conference university presidents, faculty representatives, and athletic directors, one guess is about as good as another as to what will happen when Big Ten's subcommittee of three presidents confers with representatives of the North Central Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Possibly the public at large, even collegiate following, does not attach much importance to this controversy with its many complications. If the position of the N. C. A. was upheld, however, it would be possible—we do not say probable—for the N. C. A. to so restrict Big Ten athletic activities as to menace their future and thereby deprive middle western sports followers of the most interesting features of amateur sport.

If one guess is as good as another, let The Wake venture into the hazardous field of prediction. That prediction is that when these subcommittees meet there will be diplomatic expressions of good will, regrets of any misunderstanding, and that the N. C. A. will readily admit the Big Ten is able to solve its own athletic problems and that assistance from the N. C. A. will be offered, not insisted upon, only when requested.

Instead of forcing the issue Saturday, which could have been done, the conference chose the olive branch. The N. C. A., if it chooses, may emerge from the conference without loss of dignity and still give the Big Ten just what a majority of its members no doubt will insist on having.

Cubs to Help Pirates Open at Home Today

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals yesterday called off the final game of their series, cold weather being the reason our fellows were deprived of the opportunity of evening the series before departing on their first National league road trip of the 1931 season.

Today the Cubs and Pirates will open the Pittsburghers' home season at Forbes field. The Cubs will play four games in Pittsburgh, then move to Cincinnati and St. Louis for four games in each city before returning to Wrigley field on May 4.

Blake Likely to Pitch.

Fred Blake, who lost the one game that the Cubs dropped to the Pirates in the opening series last week, was to have pitched against the Cards yesterday and was said to be the probable choice for the Pittsburgh opener, though Pat Malone, who also has his first game to win, has had his full quota of rest. Pat usually is effective against the Pirates and will hurl tomorrow if Blake works today.

The Cubs moved out of town with a record of four wins and three losses. Two of the victories and two of the defeats were due directly to the margin supplied by home runs. Grantham beat the Cubs 4 to 3 with a homer with one on in the eighth inning and Monday Bottomley beat them with a homer which established the final score at 3 to 2 in favor of the Cards.

Hornsby's two homers in two games against the Pirates were direct victory efforts. Hartnett gave the Cubs their first two runs of the season with one on on opening day, but the outcome did not rest on the effort, for the Cubs won 6 to 2.

Pitching Good; Hitting Spotty.

The Cub pitchers all are in excellent shape and the distress that the Cubs may have felt during their week at home was borne by the sluggers, who so frequently crumpled in the pinches. In the seven games at home 64 runners died on bases, the daily total reaching 13 on one day, 12 on another, and 11 another. This revealed, of course, a lack of punch under pressure that scarcely had been suspected of the Cubs.

Cuyler was the only sick bay inmate as the team went on the road and his indisposition was not of sufficient gravity to cause deep concern. The rest will not hurt Ki and the day off he got Monday put him one day up on last year, when he played in every exhibition game and in every one of the 156 games of the championship season and all of the games of the city series.

Izaak Waltons Open Annual Meet Tomorrow; Byrd to Talk

BY BOB BECKER.

Although the sudden death of Igloo, his pet dog and companion on his polar explorations, caused Admiral Richard E. Byrd to abandon his lecture tour and start for the east, announcement was made last night that the admiral would resume his speaking schedule and be in Chicago Friday night to address the annual banquet of the Izaak Walton league in the Sherman hotel.

The league's ninth annual convention and game conference opens tomorrow, but the sharp crack of revolvers and rifles, as well as the whirring of fishing reels, will be added to the noises of Chicago's loop district this morning when the national sportsman's show, held in conjunction with the Waltonian gatherings, opens in the Sherman hotel. It continues until Saturday night.

More Than 100 Exhibits.

The great outdoors and its related sports of fishing, camping, hunting, motoring, and canoeing are represented in this exhibition by more than 100 displays from 25 states. Sponsored by the Izaak Walton League of America, the show will draw upwards of 100,000 outdoor fans into the loop during the next four days.

A large casting pool where anglers with fishing fever may try their "shots" with fly or bait casting rods, an indoor rifle range where some of the best shooters in the country will compete for valuable cups and medals, real Sioux Indian chiefs from the Black Hills who are going to spin yarns of the wild west for boy visitors to the show, a nature bar with live game fish to swim around the Waltonian's soft drinks, and many exhibits of mounted animals and birds are among the features of the show which have been installed for the entertainment of sportsmen.

Indian, White Man Paddle.

This morning the Indian guests of the show will link historical Chicago to the Waltonian gathering when a white man and an Indian will paddle a birch bark canoe from the replica of Fort Dearborn erected by the Chicago Century of Progress on the lake front to the original site of Fort Dearborn at Michigan avenue. The canoeist, Wallace Kirkland, is a well known outdoorsman.

His companion will be Chief Whirling Thunder, a member of the Winnebago tribe. The two will carry a stone from the new fort on the lake front, which they will place under the tablet which marks the site of the original Fort Dearborn. Chief Crazy Horse and Chief Young Skunk, two Sioux Indians, are going to be on hand to greet the canoeists when they land at the Michigan avenue bridge around noon.

To Hear Authorities.

With the opening of the Walton league's convention and game conference tomorrow morning Chicago will play host to a large group of nationally known conservationists and outdoor authorities. Among the speakers at tomorrow's sessions will be Paul G. Redington, chief of the United States biological survey; Dr. Carl L. Hubbs, director of the institute of fisheries, University of Michigan, and Dr. K. C. McMurry, professor of geography, University of Michigan.

Abrams and Simon Meet in Handball Semi-Final

Decide Three A. A. U. Tank Titles Tonight

The last three Central A. A. U. swimming and diving championships to be decided this season will be held tonight at the Medinah Athletic club with a large number of local men and women aquatic stars participating.

Emma Shematis, Marlys Lapin, and Dagny Van Maarth will compete to determine which one of them will bring the senior 300 yard individual medley title to the I. W. A. C. Men swimmers from Chicago, Rockford and Milwaukee will appear in the other two events, the junior 50 yard swim and the junior 10 foot springboard diving.

Three exhibitions are on the evening's program. The world's champion medley relay team of the Lake Shore A. C., composed of Walter Laufer, Dan Horn, and Dick Hinch, will appear in a special event, while Walter Colbath of Lake Shore, national diving champion, will show some fancy dives, and Frank Snary and Fred Springer will perform an exhibition of comedy diving.

CLUB MEMBERS URGE LAWS TO CURB BILLBOARDS

Advocate Tree Planting to Beautify Roads.

Three important committees of the City club of Chicago yesterday issued a joint report in which they urged the elimination of billboards along highways and the planting of trees, shrubs and flowers on a large scale to replace them.

The committees, those on municipal art, on parks, forest preserves and public recreation, and on street and public safety, declared that the abolition of the advertising billboard is the first and most necessary step to be taken toward making motor roads more attractive.

Trace War on Billboards.

"For more than twenty years," the joint report stated, "numerous organizations have been working against the billboard nuisance. The City club has taken a leading part in the movement. Literature is available on the subject and public opinion is now definitely crystallizing.

"All organizations concerned with the problem are in agreement on the necessity for creating an aroused public sentiment for the passage of laws in the several states to regulate and tax all highway billboards. Some states have already passed such laws. One of the best is that recently adopted by the state of New Jersey."

Legislation Is Recommended.

The committees recommended that Illinois adopt similar legislation. Summarized, the provisions of the New Jersey act are:

1. All outdoor advertising companies must be licensed and obtain a permit before erecting any board adjacent to a highway outside village or city limits.

2. Permits are not required for advertising a business on its own premises.

3. An annual tax per square foot is placed on every billboard other than those exempted in the second paragraph.

4. No billboard may be located within a reasonable and safe distance of a highway intersection or railroad crossing, or where it obstructs the view of crossings. Billboards may be erected on public property only with the approval of appropriate authority.

Ban on Billboards.

5. No billboard may be erected where it can be shown that injury would be caused to adjacent property or to the public welfare, no where prohibited by municipal ordinance.

6. Fees collected are distributed in the localities where they are collected, after necessary expenses are deducted.

7. A fine is assessed against any concern erecting a billboard without a permit, and an additional fine for each day the board continues to be maintained without authority.

Urge Attractive Planting.

It was pointed out that individuals of wealth and some organizations are already subscribing money to beautify the main highways leading into Chicago. William V. Kelley has agreed to pay the whole cost of the planting of twenty miles on a new road reaching from Chicago to Lake Bluff. The Chicago Regional Planning association has taken the lead in this work.

One of the recommendations toward legislation was that all designing and planting of growths along the highway be placed in charge of a trained director, preferably connected with the state highway department. State highway funds should also be expended in part for the trees and shrubbery, it was suggested.

RUTH NICHOLS TO TRY SOLO FLIGHT ACROSS ATLANTIC

Plane Being Tuned Up for Attempt.

New York, April 21.—[Special.]—Ruth Nichols, leading American aviatrix, holder of the two way transcontinental air speed record for women and the women's altitude record for airplanes, will attempt a solo flight to Paris within the next month, it was announced today.

Although Miss Nichol's plans have not been completed, it is understood she will follow the trans-Atlantic route established by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Uses Record Breaking Plane.

Miss Nichols will use a 200 horse power Pratt and Whitney motored Lockheed-Vega monoplane, the same vehicle with which she has shattered several records for women flyers. The plane itself is now being overhauled at the New Jersey aircraft plant of Col. Chamberlin. The motor is undergoing rigid tests at the Pratt and Whitney factory in Hartford, Conn.

A week ago yesterday Miss Nichols, in the ship with which she now hopes to conquer the Atlantic, flew at a speed of 210 miles an hour, the fastest a woman has ever traveled. A Cincinnati radio company is furnishing Miss Nichols with the plane. She is understood to have financed the proposed flight herself.

Coached by Clarence Chamberlin.

She will make the first of a series of test flights in the reconditioned monoplane about the end of this week. Her preliminary hop will be made to Harbor Grace, N. F. Col. Chamberlin probably will accompany her on her northward trip. He will coach her until Dr. James H. Kimball, New York's meteorologist who has started many aviators on record flights, gives the signal that will speed her out over the Atlantic alone.

The plane, it is thought, will be capable of a speed of nearly 200 miles an hour. It will carry between 500 and 600 gallons of fuel.

Every other woman who has undertaken a flight across the ocean has intrusted herself to the skill of a male pilot. Amelia Earhart, the only woman to accomplish the dangerous flight, flew to Europe with Lou Gordon and the late Wilmer Stultz. Ruth Elder came down in the sea, but her life was saved, with her pilot, George W. Haldeman, when the plane was brought down near a ship.

But other women who intrusted their lives to men pilots were less fortunate. Frances Grayson, Elsie Mackay, the Princess Lowenstein-Wertheim, and Beryl Hart all perished.

BABY FATALLY SCALDED.

While at the home of friends at 513 South Sacramento avenue, Charles Watkins, 2 years old, 513 South Campbell avenue, was fatally scalded when a tub of water was overturned. He died yesterday in the county hospital.

SUPERSTITION OVER $2 BILLS IS COSTLY FOR U. S. TREASURY

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—Superstition is costing the treasury money. The belief that the two dollar bill is unlucky persists, along with the opinion that the baneful influence may be removed by tearing off one corner of the bill.

W. O. Woods, treasurer of the United States, said today a large percentage of the two dollar bills returned to the treasury had the corner neatly removed and that all such currency was destroyed. It costs the government approximately one cent each to replace them with new bills.

Although there were only 25 working days in March, 1,500,000 two dollar bills were issued, many to replace mutilated currency.

VIRGINIA DRY SUCCESSOR OF CANNON IS DEAD.

Richmond, Va., April 21.—(AP)—The Rev. David Hepburn, D. D., 64, for thirteen years superintendent of the Virginia Anti-Saloon league, died today. He was a militant leader of the prohibition cause. A Baptist minister until he entered the service of the Anti-Saloon league as assistant to Bishop James Cannon Jr., then superintendent for the organization in Virginia, he succeeded Dr. Cannon as superintendent.

The Virginia superintendent vigorously opposed Alfred E. Smith in the presidential campaign and was a coworker of Bishop Cannon when the bishop organized the anti-Smith Democrats.

Dr. Hepburn also came before the public eye by demanding an investigation by the governor of alleged drinking at the University of Virginia.

REAR ADMIRAL INGERSOLL DEAD IN INDIANA AT 83

La Porte, Ind., April 21.—[Special.]—Rear Admiral Royal Rodney Ingersoll, United States navy, retired, veteran of three major wars of the United States, will be buried Thursday afternoon from a little stone chapel in Pine Lake cemetery here, the chapel built by his wife as a memorial to her father, Seth Eason of La Porte.

The 83 year old veteran died this morning at his home here of uremic poisoning. He had been ill several weeks and in a coma since last Thursday. At his bedside were his wife and son, Capt. Royal Eason Ingersoll, United States navy, who made a hurried trip here from Washington after his father became unconscious.

The funeral will be private, members of the family, close friends and representatives of the navy and service organizations to attend.

The Rev. Mark L. Marshall, pastor of the Presbyterian church of which Admiral Ingersoll was a member, will read a simple service.

Admiral Ingersoll achieved a brilliant career in the navy, so distinguished that after 45 years of active service he was called from retirement to be president of a special board on naval ordnance during the world war. On Jan. 2, 1919, he was retired again to live at his home here, which he called "Seven Bells," the hour in the navy when the watch goes off duty to rest.

Born in Niles, Mich., Dec. 4, 1847, he was appointed to the United States Naval academy in 1864 during the heat of the civil war. Among ships he served on was the Constitution, "Old Ironsides."

MOTHER OF MAN WHO "INSPIRED" THE WAR BURIED

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, April 21.—(AP)—The mother of the man, who was alleged to have inspired the shot that touched off the world war, was buried today with honors by surviving Serbian Comitadjis. She was Mme. Tankosic, whose son, Lieut. Col. Voja Tankosic, was accused by the Austro-Hungarian government in 1914 of training the assassins and furnishing the arms with which the Arch Duke Franz Ferdinand and his wife, princess of Hohenberg, were slain at Sarajevo.

Mme. Tankosic's funeral was made the occasion for a great public demonstration in which the Serbian Comitadjos formed the vanguard of a procession that followed the casket from church to cemetery.

Prior to the outbreak of the war the Austro-Hungarian government dispatched an ultimatum to Serbia in which one of the clauses stipulated that Lieut. Col. Tankosic should be arrested at once and turned over to Vienna. Serbia replied that he had been taken into custody, but his importance was buried in the swift succession of events that led to the opening of hostilities. He was killed in 1915 during the retreat of the Serbian army before the Austro-Hungarian forces.

EYES PROBLEM OF WAGE LEVELS IN U. S. INDUSTRY

Roberts Says Cuts May Be Necessary.

BY O. A. MATHER.

The specter of a general reduction in wages in American industry was raised by George E. Roberts, vice president of the National City bank, New York, last night in an address before the Illinois Manufacturers' Association at the Palmer house.

While Mr. Roberts declared any lowering of wages, still he suggested that such a course may be necessary to bring about a revival of business.

"Nobody likes to say anything about reduction of wages," he said, "but equilibrium in industry must be restored in order to have full time employment and real prosperity. The war caused an enormous demand for war power, foodstuffs and many raw materials, resulting in a general rise of wages and prices. But in the great fall of prices since the war and particularly in the last year, prices and wages have not all come down together.

Cites Commodity Decline.

"The prices of farm products and crude materials generally have come down in a great slump to approximately the pre-war level. On the other hand, in the manufacturing industries, the building industry, the transportation and distributive services, governmental services, professional services, you have a vast network of relationships in which wages or personal compensation are the principal factor and these do not move readily downward.

"We may as well face the fact that, owing to the disorganization of the industries and their changed relations to each other, products are not moving in trade and into consumption as they did. The channels of trade are restricted, congested. People cannot buy the products of others because they cannot sell their own. As a matter of fact, all kinds of compensation have come down, primarily because the volume of business has fallen off.

Influence of Unemployment.

"Meanwhile a great reduction of total wage payments has occurred. The man who is out of a job certainly has his wages reduced, as also has the man who is working only three or four days a week. But such reductions do not reduce the costs of production or the costs of living and, therefore, do not stimulate consumption or increase employment. They do nothing to restore the equilibrium which is necessary to prosperity.

"I do not say that wage readjustments are necessary to a revival of business; perhaps it will come in time without them. I do not believe that anything can prevent the gradual advance of real wages as the productivity of the industries increases. But the equilibrium in industry must be restored in order to have full employment and real prosperity. The normal relationship between the industries must be restored in some way and when it is restored there will be prosperity for all.

"In the last analysis all business is an exchange of services and it follows that the goods and services must come on the markets in fairly proportionate relations to each other and to the demand for them. When you have the working population distributed in all the industries in right proportions to provide the goods and services in right proportions to each other, and they are priced in right relations to each other, the markets clear themselves with little or nothing left over, everybody is employed, and we have what we call prosperity."

Revenue Freight Loadings Up 9,423 Cars for Week

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—Revenue freight loading for the week ended April 11 was announced today by the American Railway association as totaling 737,934 cars. This was an increase of 9,423 over the preceding week, but a reduction of 173,382 below the same week last year.

Miscellaneous freight loading totaled 294,315, a decrease of 89,538 under the same week in 1930; merchandise totaled 223,635, decrease 28,996; coal, 116,212, decrease 16,386; forest products, 32,536, decrease 24,771; ore, 6,636, decrease 4,843; coke, 7,250, decrease 2,943; grain and grain products, 36,910, decrease 3,043; live stock, 20,390, decrease 2,662.

Sees Better Times in Fall.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—Prospects for locomotive orders over the remainder of the year are not good, but ultimate results should not be in doubt, due to the large number of obsolete locomotives in the United States, William H. Woodin, chairman of the board of American Locomotive company, told stockholders at the annual meeting today.

While his company at present is operating at about 10 to 12 per cent of capacity, Mr. Woodin believes the country is "at the bottom in the business depression," and that we are "bound to see better times in the fall."

The American Locomotive company has unfilled orders on hand amounting to fifty locomotives, compared with 190 on the books as of June 30 last. This drop has resulted from the fact that railroads are buying as little as possible.

The Pennsylvania system, however, is contemplating the purchase of a large amount of equipment for the electrification of its lines from New York to Washington, according to Mr. Woodin, who believes that this "may bring about a change in the present situation."

Notwithstanding the pronounced recession in business, American Locomotive has not cut salaries, it was learned, although current operating expenses have been reduced about $1,500,000. The company's plants are working about three days a week.

With regard to the bonus system, William C. Dickerman, president, told share owners that an average of 5 per cent of net income had been paid in the three or four years up to 1930, but that no distribution was made in 1930.

Discuss Labor Policies.

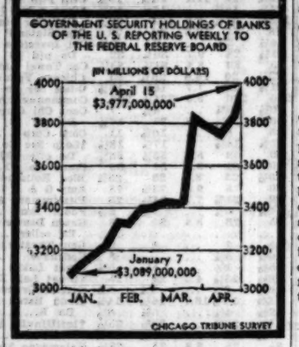
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—Rail executives were reported in Wall street today to have held another meeting with representatives of labor organizations here last night to discuss general railroad labor policies.

Whether there was any discussion of wages was not disclosed, but it is believed that the problem of maintaining existing wage levels has been a subject of considerable informal discussion recently in rail circles.

A conference between labor representatives and executives of eastern trunk line systems in the four party consolidation agreement was held here a month ago. Labor's attitude toward the consolidation was brought up in that meeting. It was said, however, that the eastern consolidation plans were not discussed last night.

BANKS ADD FURTHER TO THEIR GOVERNMENT BOND HOLDINGS



REVEAL DETAILS OF NORMAN'S LONG TERM CREDIT BANK PLAN

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

BASLE, Switzerland, April 21. — Some of the details of the project on which Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, has been sounding out Washington and New York have been revealed by informed sources here.

The plan calls for the establishment of an international bank capitalized at $500,000,000—five times the authorized capital of the Bank for International Settlements here—of which only a tenth would be paid in. The new bank would be backed by all the strongest central banks and by the world bank itself, Mr. Norman desiring that the latter subscribe $25,000,000 of the capital of the proposed institution.

Its function, as previously stated, would be to finance long term credits to the governments of eastern Europe and South America by lending them the proceeds from bonds which the new bank would issue in its own name as mortgage companies do.

All sources agree, however, that Mr. Norman has failed to get American support for his grandiose plan, just as he had previously failed to get the French interested. They agree further that the scheme in its original form thereby died abandoning, beyond that they disagree as to what the effects of the Franco-American rebuff will be on Mr. Norman and his plan.

REPORTS AGREEMENT.

LONDON, April 22.—[Wednesday.]—(AP)—The London Daily Mail says that, with one or two exceptions, American banking interests have agreed "at least to the general outlines" of a plan for a world trade credit bank to finance trade with new markets, including Russia, with which the visit of Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, to the United States was chiefly concerned. The Mail says that Gov. Norman was likely to announce the formation of the bank at the forthcoming meeting of the world bank for international settlements at Basle.

See No Violation of Trust Laws in Oil Relief Plans

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—The solid support given by the Hoover administration to the efforts of the oil industry and the states for restoring the demoralized petroleum trade was given new emphasis today by Attorney General Mitchell.

The legal member of the Hoover cabinet said he saw no violation of the Sherman anti-trust law in the plans now being worked out. His statement was understood to refer to the voluntary restriction of crude oil by the industry in each state; the compact between the oil producing states which is being promoted by the oil states advisory committee, and the imports limitations, voluntarily adopted by each of the principal users of foreign oil at the instance of Secretary Lamont.

Designed Within the Law.

"Neither the commerce nor the interior department, as I understand it," Mitchell said, "is urging or proposing any plan that is in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act."

The attorney general added there was no dissension among members of President Hoover's cabinet concerning either the oil states' compact now being formed to curtail production or the agreement worked out between Secretary Lamont and the larger oil importing companies to cut down the volume of oil coming into the country.

"As I understand it," he said, "both are designed to help the industry settle its problems within the law."

Indications were that the oil situation had been discussed at today's meeting of the cabinet. Secretary Wilbur, at about the same time that Mitchell issued his statement, commented that any one who believed the justice department disapproved the petroleum restrictions was thoroughly mistaken.

Wilbur has shown several times that he felt rather keenly the editorial and congressional criticism of his oil policy which of late has frequently charged violation of the anti-trust laws.

OIL OUTPUT CLIMBS

New York, April 21.—(AP)—Daily average gross crude oil production in the United States increased 113,750 barrels in the week ended April 18, totaling 2,422,000 barrels, the American Petroleum institute's weekly summary indicates. Daily average production east of California increased 115,750 barrels to 1,895,100 barrels.

Refineries representing 95.7 per cent of estimated total capacity, operated at 68.2 per cent of their capacity, reported daily average runs of crude oil to stills as 2,434,100 barrels. Daily average the previous week for refineries representing 95.7 per cent of total, operated at 66.4 per cent of capacity, was 2,371,200 barrels. Gasoline stocks at these refineries were 46,384,000 barrels, against 46,757,000 barrels.

BY FRED HARVEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—Wall street skies continued heavily overcast today. Numerous stocks, including virtually the entire railroad group and several "blue chip" favorites of the industrial division, yielded to new low price levels for the year or longer.

United States Steel common hit a new four year low at 127½, off 3 points on the day, and various speculative headliners, including Auburn, Industrial Rayon, Ingersoll Rand, and Worthington Pump broke precipitately, their net losses ranging from 4 to 9 points or so.

Except for a flurry of selling in the final hour, trading dragged along in the same monotonous fashion it has affected for the last several weeks, with most issues falling rather from what the street is wont to refer to as their own weight rather than any aggressive selling pressure. Nothing came out of the news budget to cause any excitement either way—not that the street would have become excited if there had.

Pass Up Hopeful News.

The moderately hopeful views of the steel corporation management expressed at yesterday's meeting came in for some ennuied comment, but the financial community is pretty well surfeited with "hopeful" prophecies just now and it is not of record that any of them are causing any mad rush to buy stocks. What the rank and file would like to see above all else just now is a rally of some consequence—"technical" or otherwise—and one that will hold until they have had time to get their breaths.

Probably the fresh sinking spell of the rails was as much to blame as anything else for the acute weakness of the list as a whole today. The break in this group was the most severe that has occurred in the course of the current decline, such standard dividend payers at Atchison, Illinois Central, New York Central, Southern Pacific, and Union Pacific being forced into new low territory on losses of from 3 to 6 points. New York Central dropped 4 points to within

AUTO INDUSTRY IS HEADED FOR NORMAL, EXECUTIVE ASSERTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—"Automobile production and sales are steadily progressing toward what we regard as normal and may reach that point this summer," R. E. Hutchison, vice president, told stockholders of the Chrysler corporation at the annual meeting today.

"The industry is selling this year a larger percentage of the current output than at any corresponding period in the last six years," he asserted, "and this indicates a wholesome production policy which will no doubt result in a more sustained production than heretofore during the balance of the year."

Shares voted at the meeting constituted 70 per cent of the total shares outstanding, one of the largest representations at any annual meeting. Since the last annual meeting the number of stockholders increased from 39,973 to 45,929. Marshall E. Sampsell was elected a director.

Returns from thirty-two states show March registrations of 110,131 new passenger cars compared with 80,891 in February, an increase of 43.5 per cent and equal to 65.2 per cent of the 178,069 cars titled in the same states in March last year.

Recommend Wisconsin Security Bill to Senate

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., April 21.—The rush bill to require state qualification of securities listed on the Chicago and Boston stock exchanges was recommended into the senate tonight for passage by the committee on corporations and taxation which held a hearing on the measure. The vote in the committee was two to three. Stocks now listed on these exchanges are permitted to be sold in Wisconsin now without any state scrutiny. The bill would continue the exemption as far as the New York exchange is concerned.

Kelly Reports Increase in Earnings of the Fair Store

Profits of the Fair, loop department store, during January and February were considerably in excess of earnings for the corresponding months of 1930, D. F. Kelly, president, said yesterday. Actual figures were not made public, as the company does not issue formal interim statements. In 1930 the company had a net profit of $546,275, which was equivalent after preferred dividends, to 72 cents a share on the common stock.

RAISES FLAG TO CELEBRATE BEST BUSINESS DAY

Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co., wholesale hardware dealers, yesterday hoisted the American flag over their huge building on North Water street, just east of the Michigan avenue bridge, to signalize the biggest day in the firm's history in number of articles sold and shipped.

"Monday was the largest day in volume of articles sold since our company was established in 1855," Frank Hibbard, chairman of the board, explained. "Of course, we have better days in volume of cost of goods sold.

"The heavy sale of Monday indicates that merchants now have little on their shelves and they are now replenishing their low stocks. The spring cleanup campaign was responsible for a good part of our business. We have some 60,000 different articles in our bins and we had to dip into most of them to meet Monday's demand."

Chesapeake & Ohio March Income Is Up $200,000

Propose Merger of Two Indiana Utility Firms

Merger of the Attica Electric company and the Wabash Valley Electric company into the Northern Indiana Power company is proposed in a petition filed with the public service commission of Indiana. The companies operate in the same general territory in central and central western Indiana and are operating subsidiaries of the Central Indiana Power company.

Intertype Corp. Places Dividend on $1 Basis

New York, April 21.—(AP)—Directors of Intertype corporation reduced the annual dividend basis on the common stock to $1 from $2 by declaring a quarterly payment of 25 cents. Kawneer company directors omitted the quarterly dividend of 62½ cents a share on the common stock, due at this time.

GEN. ELECTRIC CO. EARNS 38C SHARE FOR 1ST QUARTER

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 21.—Confirming earlier predictions that the General Electric company would fail by a small margin to cover its dividend requirements for the first quarter of this year, the report issued today revealed net profit available for dividends on the common stock for the March period of $10,844,344.

Earnings were equal to 38 cents a share, compared with the quarterly dividend of 40 cents, against net income of $14,398,790, or 50 cents a share, in the corresponding three months of last year. This is the first time the company has had to dip into surplus to pay dividends in many years.

New business, in common with other leading equipment manufacturers, suffered a sharp decline during the period.

Stevens Hotel Company to Pay Bond Interest

Interest on the Stevens Hotel company 6 per cent first mortgage bonds, due 1945, and on the junior bond issue will be paid July 1, Ernest J. Stevens said yesterday. A sharp break in the price of the bonds followeded the filing of the company's 1930 earnings report with the New York Stock exchange.

The company reported operating income before depreciation of $806,943, against $1,245,418 in the preceding year. The earnings covered interest charges on the senior bonds but fell short of requirements on the junior issues. Mr. Stevens predicted that the company will be on an earning basis by the end of 1931.

W. G. Moorehead & Co. Fail to Clear Trades

W. G. Moorehead & Co., doing a grain and stock business at 608 South Dearborn street and members of the Chicago Board of Trade, were unable to clear their trades yesterday and they were closed out. Mr. Moorehead said his trouble came from frozen assets. The house had a small open interest.

ALLAN CLEMENT RAPS TREATMENT GIVEN RAILROADS

A broadside on the "unjust discrimination" against the railroads was delivered yesterday by Allan M. Clement, senior partner of the stock exchange firm of Clement, Curtis & Co. Mr. Clement expressed the opinion that the present railroad situation can no longer be ignored without impairing the general welfare. He stressed the point that not only railroad security holders but the general public is directly affected by the plight of the carriers, which is reacting on business generally. He advocates the extension of regulation to competing agencies and the effecting of more equitable supervision for the railroads.

Ill. Central Cuts Fares to Stimulate Business

Reduced rates between all points of the Illinois Central system will go into effect Friday and Saturday, it was announced yesterday by James V. Lanigan, passenger traffic manager. The reductions will amount to 50 and 70 per cent, and will be good for a return limit to May 4. The new rates will average about a penny a mile for chair cars and coaches, and less than two cents a mile for Pullman and parlar cars. The reduction will, according to Mr. Lanigan help stimulate business.

Estimated receipts at Chicago today: Cattle, 20,000; hogs, 16,000; sheep, 8,000.

Cattle and lambs held firm on stronger eastern support yesterday, while hogs slumped unevenly, closing on the bottom. Shipping demand for cattle and lambs has increased. Monday's shipments of lambs from Chicago at 7,991 were largest since March 23. Cattle shipments at 5,445 were second largest in the same length of time. Outsiders are buying about 36 per cent of cattle receipts now, against 24 per cent early last week.

The extreme top and general aver age price of hogs came down 10c at $7.75 and $7.20, respectively, but are still 50c above the low day of the year. Movement was slow at unevenly steady to 25c lower prices, light weights showing most of the break, with extremely heavy hogs off the least.

Buyers are discriminating against poor quality hogs and some not quite up to requirements show sharp losses. A break in the wholesale market for fresh pork brought into below east- ern prices for the first time since early last week. Five of the western markets report 44,000 hogs in sight for today, against 36,700 last Wednesday.

Today's Hogs Bid $7.60.

Light weight hogs for today's de- livery were bid $7.60 on the "to ar- rive" market yesterday, while me- diums averaging 210@260 lbs were bid $7.50, and heavy grades averaging 260@310 lbs were bid $7.10. How- ever, there were no sellers at these figures. May light were offered at $8.00. Bids of $8.00 were made on June light that were being offered at $8.50. September offers were at $9.00 and bids at $8.50. Mediums for September were offered at $8.60 and bid $8.50, while heavy grades for Sep- tember were offered at $8.75 and bid $8.40.

Best grades of cattle held firm and in some instances sold to slightly bet- ter advantage, yearlings and light steers showing most strength. Light yearlings of outstanding quality were absent, but some well finished 1,015@ 1,180 lb steers were sold at $9.25. Butcher stock sold at steady to strong prices, 128 heifers averaging 636@ 699 lbs, bringing $9.00. Calves opened stronger, but steady prices were hard to obtain later. Stockers and feeders were scarce, but sold slowly.

Lambs Bring $9.85.

Wool lambs showed most strength on yesterday's market, the top mov- ing up 10c at $9.85, while bulk of good light and handy weights sold at $9.50@9.75. The recent break has cur- tailed the marketward movement at all points, according to reports.

Five markets expect 43,000 for to- day's market, against 54,100 last Wednesday. Chicago had only 13,000 yesterday, against 21,642 the previous Tuesday, and 19,468 a year ago. Out- let for shorn stock was narrower yes- terday and barely steady prices ob- tained the bulk. Aged sheep and year- lings were unchanged.

COTTON PRICES BREAK ON FARM BOARD RUMORS

Fears that the farm board would be a heavy seller of cotton due to rumors of its plan to sell wheat scared buyers and brought selling pressure from all directions yesterday. Prices declined and closed around the lowest level, the reverse of the previous day. Moderate buying developed around the low point, but it was insufficient to cause an important upturn. Rains reported as general over the belt, with temperatures lower, but it was cold a few days of such conditions would do no damage.

The weekly weather crop report is ex- pected to show nothing bullish. Textile business throughout the world is fair and shows no change of late.

Net losses on futures in Chicago were 14@16 points, with New Orleans off 10@18 and New York off 13@16. Spots in New York dropped 10 points to 10.20c, with New Or- leans off 20 points to 9.90c; Galveston and Savannah a holiday. Liverpool closed 2@6 points net lower, with spot sales 5,000 bales. RUMORS OF U. S. WHEAT DUMPING LEAD TO PROBE

Cause Price Breaks in World Markets.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

A government investigation was under way in Chicago yesterday con- ducted by the grain futures adminis- tration division of the United States department of agriculture to determine the source of press reports to the effect that the federal farm board had decided to dump its accumulated hold- ings of cash wheat, variously esti- mated at 200,000,000 to 275,000,000 bu. in European markets. This report did not appear in THE TRIBUNE.

The suggestion was made that per- haps the report was misconstrued from an announcement Monday that the farm board intended to export around 25,000,000 bushels. This figure had been previously given out by the board's total holdings.

The rumor proved to be a bombshell to the European trade, and while the farm board issued a prompt denial of the press reports half an hour before the North American grain exchanges opened for business, the Liverpool market broke 1½c from Monday's fin- ish and resulted in general selling in Chicago and Winnipeg, especially the latter, which dropped as much as 1¾c.

Receives Wide Circulation.

According to cables received from Europe the rumor apparently received the widest circulation, and despite the denials which were promptly sent abroad the Liverpool market failed to rally and closed about the bottom, with net losses of 1¼@1½d. Accord- ing to American grain trade leaders European buyers have been under the impression for a year or more that the board would dump its holdings, and it has only been in the last two months that buyers abroad have shown any confidence in taking cash wheat in volume from the leading ex- porting countries, due to the untir- ing efforts on the part of the Stabili- zation corporation to dissipate the idea that it was to throw its holdings on to the market regardless of price.

Sells 7,000,000 Bushels.

Since the Stabilization corporation notified the world in February that it would sell around 25,000,000 bu do- mestic wheat which was at the Atlan- tic and Pacific and Gulf ports and not available for the domestic trade at the world's price level, sales are esti- mated to have been 7,000,000 to 8,000,- 000 bu, but were effected in such man- ner as not to depress the price.

Liquidation by scattered longs de- veloped in old May wheat in Chicago as a result of the report, and caused a break of 1¼c to 81¾c, the lowest figure since March 25, and 1¾c below the minimum price which the Stabiliza- tion quotes for No. 2 hard winter in the local market. The July dropped to 83¾c, off 1¼c from Monday's close, but the market became oversold and toward the last there was general buy- ing on complaints of damage received from a few sections in Kansas due to late freezing temperatures over night. The result was a rally of 1⅝@ 1¾c from the inside figures on the new crop months, with the close at net gains of ⅜@½c for the day, with July 84½@84¾c, September 64¼@ 65¾, and December 67¾c, although late reports from Kansas claimed there had been no damage. Old May was ¾c lower at the last at 82¼c.

Less Export Activity.

There was much less activity in ex- port circles during the day, although around 500,000 bu Canadian wheat was understood to have been sold abroad. Winnipeg rallied with Chicago toward the last and finished only ¼c lower, with July at 64¼c, or 2¾c under Liv- erpool. Buenos Aires after being 1⅝ @1¾c higher at the opening reacted and closed ¼c lower to ¼c higher.

Liquidation was on in corn and oats, helped by the early weakness in wheat, and with stop loss orders un- covered May corn dropped ⅞ to 59c, equaling the inside figure of the sea- son, while July and September oats sold at a new low, the former touching 27¾c.

I. C. C. ANNOUNCES BASIS FOR FIXING RAILROAD VALUES

Washington, D. C., April 21.—(AP)—How the interstate commerce com- mission will determine the valuation of American railroads was made known today in ordering the Rich- mond, Fredericksburg and Potomac railroad to pay $969,705 into the rail- way contingent fund.

The determination of valuation was the crux of the celebrated St. Louis and O'Fallon cases in which the Su- preme court held the commission had not given adequate consideration to the cost of reproduction of the line.

The order today, the first of its kind since the O'Fallon case, was issued under the 1920 transportation act pro- viding that one-half of a road's earn- ings in excess of six per cent shall go into a contingent fund. The com- mission said both cost of reproduc- tion and the original cost must re- ceive consideration.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Cash business with the farm board yesterday was checked by the rumors regarding its movement to sell its wheat abroad at lower prices. Until confidence is restored buyers of cash wheat are not expected to take hold. In the meantime there is also said to be a lull in adjustments between the holders of cash wheat and the farm board in arranging for the taking over of the cash grain and giving up of the May interest.

A closing message from Winnipeg to J. E. Bennett said rumors regard- ing the farm board led to liquidation and an early decline. Overnight ex- port business was small and support lacking. With the denial by the farm board as to its intentions there was a gradual improvement in feeling. This was also helped by reports of damage to jointed wheat in western Kansas.

Broomhall says that the wet spring weather in Russia has delayed seed- ing and offers from there have prac- tically ceased. In Poland, the Balkan countries and in Hungary cold weather has prevailed, causing complaints of damage. Italy's crops as well as those of Spain are generally favorable with some dry spots in the southern part of the latter country.
